22,500-Ton Glorious Sent to Bottom With Other Important Units, Is Word

London, June 10.—(AP)—Britain announced today the sinking of the 22,500-ton aircraft carrier Glorious, the 19,840-ton transport Orama and the presumed loss of the destroyers Acasta and Ardent and the tanker Oil Pioneer.

The Glorious carried a normal complement of 1,216 men, including Royal Air Force pilots. Her actual crew normally was 748 men.

The Orama formerly was a liner in Britain's service to the Far East and was the namesake of another auxiliary British war vessel sunk by the Germans in the World war.

Two destroyers, Acasta and Ardent, presumably were lost along with the tanker Oil Pioneer.

All the ships were in company of the Glorious in northern waters.

The admiralty announcement failed to say how many men were lost in the sinkings.

parachutists were encircled and were being cleaned out while the defense lines held firm and even counter-attacked at one point.

Soon after Generalissimo Maxime Weygand of the French forces predicted that the battle soon would extend clear to the Swiss frontier, the mighty guns of France's Maginot line opened up against the German west wall.

They blasted away for an hour and 25 minutes, drawing German replies in kind, and then both suddenly fell silent. Fires blazed on both sides.

General Weygand predicted that the end of the Nazi effort must come soon, and told his men to "hold tight" in what he called "the last quarter of an hour."

British Planes Busy
The Paris flight was subjected to renewed German aerial bombardment, while the British said their planes ranged over Germany Sunday to destroy ammunition dumps and oil stocks and French aviation drew active combat in attacks on German troop columns.

Almost overshadowed by the din of death on the western front, Norway gave up her struggle against the German invaders Sunday at midnight after two months of conflict with the aid of British and French forces.

The Norwegian government news agency, which announced the capitulation from Tromsø, said allied help was being withdrawn because of the "necessities of war"—meaning the need for men on the western front—and that the Norwegians could not continue alone.

King Haakon arrived in Britain on a warship and was received by high admiralty officers.

Guard U. S. Embassy
Italy placed a picket of steel-helmeted soldiers around the American embassy in Rome last night, presumably to guard against demonstrators who failed to appear.

Moscow announced that the Italian and Soviet Russian ambassadors, who have been absent from their respective posts for several months, were returning to duty.

Russia herself announced the patching up of a quarrel of long standing with an agreement with Japan on the Manchoukuo outer Mongolia border, scene of many a fight.

RADIO 'PHONE LOSES PARIS CONNECTION

New York, June 10.—(AP)—Radio-telephone communication between New York and Paris was stopped early today and there was no indication when it would be resumed, the New York telephone company reported.

The trans-Atlantic transmitting station is 16 miles northwest of Paris and telephone officials here assume the interruption might be due to military activity. Radio-telephone communication between New York and London continues normal, and in an emergency Paris could be reached that way.

cept the procedure suggested." The president said, too, that he had expressed his administration's willingness to try to cooperate with the Italian government when the appropriate occasion arose for creation of "a more stable world order through the reduction of armaments, and through the construction of a more liberal international economic system."

Prayers For Allies

But by choosing to preserve what it terms its "freedom of action" and to fulfill what it states are its promises to Germany, Mr. Roosevelt said, Italy had "manifested disregard for the rights and security of other nations, for the lives of the peoples of those nations which are directly threatened by this spread of the war" and had evidenced an unwillingness to attempt to achieve its aspirations by peaceful means.

"On this tenth day of June, 1940, in this university founded by the first great American teacher of democracy," Mr. Roosevelt said, "we send forth our prayers and our hopes to those beyond the seas who are maintaining with magnificent valor their battle for freedom."

Discussing his communications with Mussolini, the president said: "I made it clear that in the opinion of the government of the United States any extension of the hostilities in the region of the Mediterranean might result in a still greater enlargement of the scene of the conflict in the Near East and Africa, and that if this came to pass no one could foretell how much greater the extension of the war might eventually become."

Son Graduating

The president spoke also as the father of one of those receiving degrees. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., was graduating from the university law school, and the chief executive referred to "questions" each generation of young men and women have to ask the world.

"It is right," he said, "that each new generation should ask questions."

"But in recent months the principal question has been greatly simplified. Once more the future of the nation and of the American people is at stake."

"We need not and we will not, in any way, abandon our continuing effort to make democracy work within our own borders. We still insist on the need for the vast improvements in our own social and economic life."

"But that is a component part of national defense itself. The program unfolds swiftly and into it will fit the responsibility and opportunity for every man and woman to preserve our heritage in days of peril. . . . The love of freedom is still fierce and steady in the nation today."

Lone Island Idea Out

Mr. Roosevelt termed "an obvious delusion" the belief that the United States can "safely" be permitted "to become a lone island in a world dominated by the philosophy of force."

"Such an island," he said, "may be the dream of those who still talk and vote as isolationists. Such an island represents to me and to the overwhelming majority of Americans today a helpless nightmare of a people without freedom, a people lodged in prison, handcuffed, hungry, fed through the bars from day to day by the contemptuous, upstying masters of other continents. . . ."

"Let us not hesitate—all of us—to proclaim certain truths. Overwhelmingly we, as a nation,

FORESTS, RESORTS POPULAR SUNDAY IN RECORD HEAT

Summer opened the throttle wide yesterday and southern Oregonians rushed to mountain and forest resorts to get out of its way.

The temperature here reached a 1940 high of 95 degrees, four degrees higher than the previous year's maximum of 91 recorded May 22. The maximum yesterday was reached at 1:30, an unusual circumstance as the peak ordinarily is not attained until 4 or 4:30 p. m. The temperature held around 95, however, and comparative readings at 4:15 p. m. showed that Medford had the hottest weather of any reporting city in the state.

There was a good chance today to exceed yesterday's maximum as the mercury stood at 95 degrees at 1:30 this afternoon.

Outdoor recreationists came into their own yesterday for the first time this year, previous week-ends having been cool or wet. Forest camps and mountain and lake resorts, as a result, were heavily utilized.

A large crowd was at Diamond lake and those who had not made reservation for boats had to wait their turn. The lake was dotted with boats and many a good catch of fish was reported. Many picnics were held on the shores of the lake.

Rogue River national forest camps attracting many persons included McKee Bridge, Union Creek, Lake of the Woods, Rocky Point and Four-Mile Lake. It was the first time this year fishermen were able to get to Four-Mile lake.

Other maximum temperatures yesterday included: Baker 78, Bend 81, Brookings 71, Burns 78, Eugene 86, Hood River 89, Lakeview 80, North Bend 69, Pendleton 87, Portland 88, Roseburg 90, second highest in the state.

BOMBASTIC TALK BY DUCE SIGNALS ENTRANCE IN WAR

on in Rome in the face of certain war.

He declared that "the allies should have accepted the proposals of Hitler before the Polish campaign" which began the war last Sept. 1, two days before the actual declaration of open hostilities by the allies.

Mussolini, speaking from a balcony of the Palazzo Venezia overlooking the Piazza Venezia, jammed with cheering, shouting members of the fascist party, soldiers and civilians, said:

"Our conscience is perfectly tranquil." The crowds in the piazza roared approval.

All the world knows, he said, that Italy has tried in vain for peace.

"But all this is a fact of the past," he continued.

"Now we are ready to face all the risks and sacrifices of the war."

Again and again he was interrupted by roars of the populace.

A Great People Ready

"A great people is ready to face its destiny and mark its own history in the future," the premier said.

"We want to break the chains that suffocate us in the Mediterranean."

"This gigantic struggle is only a phase in the development of our revolution," he said.

"This asserts itself against the stranglers—the rich nations."

"It is a struggle between young and progressive people as against the decadent people, the struggle of one century as against another century."

"The dies are now cast!" Mussolini's voice rose at times to the breaking point as he drove his points home.

"In a memorable meeting at Milan I declared that friends will always help each other," he said, apparently referring to the Rome-Berlin axis.

"In this great historic event, we turn our thoughts to the king-emperor."

Again there was a long interruption as the masses roared.

"The king of Italy has always interpreted the soul of Italy as wanting to join her soul with that of Germany," he said.

"Totalitarian and fascist history for the third time is on its feet ready to strike."

"The order of the day binds all to the same cause," he cried.

New Era of Peace

"We will give a new era of peace to Italy, to Europe and to the world."

"People of Italy run to your arms!"

"Take up your cause, all your valor!"

It Duce's speech was the climax of a long preparation for war, intensified to urgent speed in recent weeks.

For months, Italy has been going increasingly on a war footing.

Her troops have been mobilized. Her meager stores of oil and gasoline—almost all imported—have been rationed.

In the past week, imperative calls to her merchant fleet to come home or seek the haven of neutral ports virtually has swept her commerce from the seas.

Italy has made herself ready.

The nation has been prepared to expect war, war on the side of Germany, partner in the axis which was welded a year ago into an even stronger military alliance.
