TWO MILES TO EAT—As far as the eye can see, this picnic table reaches two miles through the trees. It's for non-native Californians who attended the "All-state Picnic" at Ontario, Calif. They drank 10,000 gallons of orange juice, too.

WAR AGAINST DISEASE—To spare the lives of laboratory animals used to grow immunity-giving vaccines, the federal bureau of animal industry in Washington now propagates viruses in incubating eggs; the developing embryos are used to make vaccines for treatment of animal diseases. Above, eggs are drilled for insertion of the highly-infectious virus.

They trip up accidents going somewhere to happen

SINCE Willie Stonehatchet, the cave-man, first bashed a toe while chopping a rival into an ornament, industrial accidents have been a bane. Yet last year Standard established the best safety record in its history.

The oil business is definitely on the he-man side. It involves heavy casings, high pressures, nitro-glycerine, trucks, flammables, and work performed high up in a derrick. Yet in 1939 our average accident toll for the preceding 10 years was cut in half.

This accomplishment required the full cooperation of Company executives and the men on the job. It is true that no workman ever wanted to acquire a broken leg, but the 16 safety engineers in the Company have shown both the management and the men practical methods of beating the accident rap.

The dividends of this humanitarian enterprise were collected on all sides. By wives whose husbands came home hale. By children who didn't have to be told that father was in the hospital. By Company officials who—since the days when they once took their chances in oil field or refinery—have determined that their successors shall get a better break.
