

LOCAL MEN KNEW WENDELL WILLKIE AT U. OF INDIANA

Wendell Willkie, the man of the hour, was a big farm boy who started from the bottom and worked his way through college in the same wholesome and honest manner which he did later in business and which yesterday saw him nominated for president of the United States, said George M. Roberts and C. T. Steward who were classmates with him at the University of Indiana in Bloomington, Ind. Mr. Steward and the Republican presidential nominee, entered college as freshmen in 1909 and sat next to each other in a history class. "Willkie first came to school in a grey coat and brown trousers, later he wore turtle neck sweaters and never seemed to care much about dressing up," Mr. Steward recalled today. "If you met him just once, you would never forget him," the local man said. Mr. Steward recalled that when Mr. Willkie first started to college at the age of 15, he was bashful and was never one to push himself forward although he later gained enough confidence and individual ideas to become the leader of a non-fraternity group. Mr. Steward mentioned that he always remembered Mr. Willkie's appealing and honest eyes. Mr. Willkie was known in college as Lewis and it was not until he graduated that he changed to Wendell. There were three brothers, Robert, Herman and "Lewis" all in college at the same time and they were known as the "Willkie brothers". None of them ever had much money and therefore did not join campus clubs or enter much into college activities. Mr. Roberts recalled that later on in school, Mr. Willkie became affiliated with Beta Theta Pi fraternity at the same time that Paul V. McNutt was in the house. He said the man in college had a keen mind, who, when he reached an opinion voiced it when the opportunity came that Willkie was graduated from the liberal arts and law schools, that he was popular and possessed the same qualities of wholesomeness and honesty which appeal to the voting public today.

JOHN M. BAKER, 59, HAILED TO COURT FOR POINTING GUN

John M. Baker, 59, of 331 Kennett street pleaded guilty in justice of the peace court this morning to a charge of pointing a firearm at another, and passing of sentence was postponed by Judge William R. Coleman to 3 o'clock this afternoon. The complaint against Baker was signed by Mrs. Rose Huff of 329 Kennett street.

Baker was arrested by city police at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, after he had gone to the home of his neighbor, William H. Huff, and allegedly threatened him and Mrs. Huff with a 22-calibre loaded revolver. Police said that Baker walked into the Huff residence and at the point of the gun, demanded to know where Mrs. Baker had gone.

The Baker's, police stated, apparently had had a fight, as the Baker home was littered with broken vases and overturned furniture.

Baker first accosted Mr. Huff outside, police said, then left him and walked into the Huff residence and covered Mrs. Huff with the revolver. In the meantime Mr. Huff went to a telephone and called police.

Police stated that Baker was taken into custody without trouble.

Judge its FLAVOR by any standard you choose,

Like tasty foods, Bohemian Club Export Lager has a "differentness" in flavor that always tempers the appetite. Sparkling with LIFE, it has more of a zip and a tang—yet it has been made so delightfully mellow by months of careful aging in wood. It is a beer with an unforgettable character in its flavor.
