DAM NEAR GOLD HILL NEARS COMPLETION; GOLD FOUND IN BED

Pouring of cement on the diversion dam of the Portland-Beaver Cement plant in Rogue River near Gold Hill, will be completed next Monday, according to Contractor Gilbert Stuart. A number of prospectors and miners of Gold Hill, expect to do some mining on the river bed when the water is turned into the diversion canal. It has long been a Gold Hill theory the river bed is rich in gold.

Stuart reports that one day recently he "sluiced" a hole in the river bed and netted $70. A couple of days later he tried another hole, and the take for the day was about a dime.

When construction of the diversion dam started last spring the state fish and game commission sought an injunction prohibiting the project on the ground it would bother the fish. Testimony was heard in circuit court, and the writ application denied. Final determination of the action still pending.
