CALIF. BARTLETT'S GOING TO MARKET IN LIGHT VOLUME

Movement Confined to Sacramento River and Suisun Districts Up to July 13

San Jose, Calif., July 17.—(Spl.)—According to H. V. Beckman, secretary of the Pear Growers' Protective League, local growers' organization, the movement of the 1940 Bartlett pear crop in California has so far been entirely confined to the Sacramento river and Suisun early districts. Fresh shipments started July 1 this year as compared with June 29 last year and only reached a total volume to July 13 of 342 cars compared with 613 cars to the same date in 1939.

Probably due to a lower percentage of U. S. No. 1 grade and a higher percentage of U. S. Combination grade in this year's shipments, the combined auction average to July 13 was still slightly below that of 1939, in spite of the greatly diminished volume of the movement from these early districts.

The Federal-State inspection report of July 8 gave only 9% of the total shipments as U. S. No. 1 grade, and stated that the U. S. Combination grade, comprising the balance of the shipments, was running just within the tolerance for smaller sizes.

Net Over $50 Ton

The present average has netted the Sacramento Bartlett shippers better than $50 per ton, so that cannery purchases from these districts have been nominal or absent. Early estimates of the "river" crop have steadily deteriorated and indications now point toward a figure well below that for 1939, in itself a low crop season there.

No volume control at the Roseville concentration point has yet become necessary, the highest daily movement having only reached 39 cars on July 9 and 10 against the 50-car maximum set by the California Tree Fruit Agreement.

The Santa Clara valley growers' committee last week asked $43 for canning Bartletts, and any considerable picking in this valley will not start before July 22.

No business has yet been transacted at any price.

You'll enjoy the Fresh Sea Foods from Holly's, 123 E. Sixth.
