

GUERNSEY PICNIC AND TOUR SLATED TUESDAY, JULY 23

Jackson County Guernsey Breeders association committee met Wednesday evening at the office of R. G. Fowler to formulate plans for a full day of activities to be held Tuesday, July 23. Charles Wing is chairman of the committee and others are Mr. Fowler, L. E. Francis, Leonard Freeman, Ralph Jennings and G. H. Stowell.

The association made plans to visit all leading Guernsey breeders in the valley and for a picnic at the home of G. H. Stowell on the Rogue river at 1 p. m. Mr. Jennings is in charge of the inspection caravan.

Among places to be visited are those of Mr. Jennings, Chester Wendt, Tom Bigham and J. E. Short. At the Bigham home the 4-H club boys will display about 11 head of calves for inspection. C. A. Smith, field representative of the American Guernsey cattle club, will attend the all day event.

ORDER CLOSES STATE FORESTS

Because of hazardous fire conditions, two southern Oregon forest areas under state protection were ordered closed to unregulated use in a governor's proclamation announced today.

The areas were the McLeod area and the Jenny Creek area in the vicinity of Hyatt Prairie dam. Signs have been posted to mark the closed areas.

The closures are routine and are made at the recommendation of the state forest patrol here. It was emphasized that the only difference to the forest user is that he will now have to procure a permit to enter the closed area. Purpose of the closure is to keep the fire situation better in hand. Other areas may be closed if and when conditions warrant such action.

The permits are free and may be obtained at patrol headquarters on the Midway road here or at guard stations near the closed areas.

FOOD PROCESSING BULLETIN ISSUED

Corvallis (Sp.)—Probably no publication at Oregon State college is more in demand at this time of the year than the bulletin on "Home Food Preservation," which includes instructions on canning, drying, salting, smoking, and storing various kinds of food products.

For the second time this publication has been revised and brought up to date, and now the "third edition" is off the press and ready for free distribution to Oregon citizens. Many authorities at the college have cooperated in the preparation of the bulletin.

The new edition, Extension Bulletin No. 542, may be had from any county extension office, or directly from the college.

Langlois Has Blaze
Langlois, Ore., July 18.—(Sp.)—Fire destroyed the Cudahy Packing company cheese plant and the home of Manager D. A. King last night. King, who said the blaze apparently originated near the boiler, estimated the loss at $12,000.

Pilchard Appear
Astoria, Ore., July 18.—(Sp.)—Pilchard appeared in large schools off the Oregon and Washington coasts today but the seine fleet remained idle because of a price dispute. Plant operators said fishermen asked $14 a ton, $6 more than offered.

CONVENTION END SLATED TONIGHT WITH F.D.R. TALK

Roosevelt already were being felt.

Here and there among the delegates were indications of bitterness over the iron-fisted control of the convention by the Roosevelt men. But there were no indications that any substantial trend of bolts from the ticket would develop.

The delegates yelled and sweated through the hot and humid hours last night and at 1:41 a. m. (Chicago daylight time) their major job was done and the chair let them go home under orders to be back at 2 p. m.

Putting Farley in nomination, Senator Carter Glass, (D., Va.) blistered the third term idea. There was reference by the anti-draft brigade to their men and the way they kept their word. But this convention would have none of that.

Wanted Roosevelt
It wanted Mr. Roosevelt and it got him at 12:55 a. m. when New York's fat delegation of 94 votes delivered 64½ votes for the draft with a consolation prize of 25 for Farley and a hopeless 1 for Secretary of State Cordell Hull. Three and one-half of New York's delegates abstained from voting.

The convention met early last evening—shortly after 8 o'clock and adopted its platform. It was a long one in contrast to the brief document on which Mr. Roosevelt sought his first two White House terms. The fight which bubbled around the foreign relations plank did not spill onto the convention floor. When Resolutions Committee Chairman Robert F. Wagner moved that the platform be adopted and Barkley put the question, there was a swelling chorus of "aye" to which the hoarse gallery crowds added their unfranchised approval.

Delegates In Hurry
Barkley did not bother to ask for a second to Wagner's motion. The convention was in a hurry to get to the presidential nomination. The platform said that foreign wars shall not come to America and that "we will not send our army, naval or air forces to fight in foreign lands outside the Americas, except in case of attack."

Singer Joe Allen and his musical pals were there in chaps and yellow shirts to whoop it up for Garner but the demonstration never came—only Texas delegates marched with them.

Wright Morrow of Houston, Texas, placed the veteran statesman in nomination but his speech was not in this convention's key.

Two minutes after Garner's name had been placed before the convention, it was forgotten in the brass band's melody and 10 minutes later the band was forgotten, too.

Farley's days as a cabinet member and national committee chairman are almost over. He uttered what probably were his last words in those capacities before a great political convention early today. It was in the same hall and almost in the same spot where he stood smiling and perspiring eight years ago this month as Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt, of New York, lifted another Democratic national convention to a frenzy of enthusiasm with his address accepting his first nomination.

Farley was not up there today to cheer the delegates on in a Roosevelt demonstration. He stepped up a beaten man unable even to hold all the 34 votes which had been pledged to him by the Massachusetts presidential primary.
