Dress Rehearsals In Last Two Weeks Before Opening

With one week already completed, production heads for the sixth annual Shakespearean Festival are starting their last two weeks of dress rehearsals preparatory to opening of eight nights of "Shakespeare under the stars" in Ashland's civic Elizabethan theater.

Director William David Cottrell has reported that all four plays are now assuming a light, breezy tempo and that the players themselves are "getting into the swing of the movement."

Lois M. Bowmer, the art director, is now completing the last of an estimated 125 new costumes for the plays.

Dress rehearsals are now restricted to holders of sponsoring memberships and their invited guests, in keeping with the policy established several years ago.

Sponsoring members may now make their reservations for the plays. Local ticket headquarters have been established at Pruitt's Music Center in Medford and will be in charge of Lillian Davis. Ashland ticket holders are asked to call at the Shakespeare theater office itself on Pioneer street. The general box-office will open late this week.

Queen Elizabeth and her Shakespearean court will leave southern Oregon Wednesday for a three-day tour through the Willamette valley. A second tour is planned through northern California.

THE SPIRIT OF

by JOHN CLINTON

You know, in writing these columns I feel a certain obligation to my readers—if an— to refer to Union rather than just advertise it.

That explains why when the boss said: "Write something about our Stop-Wear lubrication being different from ordinary lubrication," I said: "Different how? Aren't all lubrication jobs the same?"

Well, they took my Hispano-Plymouth and gave it a regular Stop-Wear job. When they brought it back, they said: "Now look, Clinton. We want you to observe 3 things:

"You can see the difference, feel the difference, and hear the difference. Get in and drive around the block, then quit being a skeptic!"

Which I did. Well! I could feel the difference in the way it steered and shifted! I did hear the difference in the way it sounded—quiet as a whisper, and as for seeing the difference, that was obvious—car dusted off, tires and running boards dressed, glass gleaming, even the interior cleaned out!

Don't just take my word for it. Drive down to your Union station and have 'em do a Stop-Wear job on your car. Then, drive it. If you don't agree it's got anything beat you ever tried before, then may I never write another column in all my life.

WOULD ALSO CALL OFFICERS RESERVE FOR WAR TRAINING

thority he requested, the guard would be used to aid in training conscripts who might be called to the colors under pending legislation for compulsory military training.

The president noted it would require "personal sacrifice" for those called out to leave their homes and jobs but, he said, their service was "vital to the country."

Senator Capper (R-Kas.) took the floor to declare the compulsory military training bill prepared by the senate military committee "will lead us closer all the time to the European war."

A voluntary system of obtaining enlistment for the army should be tried for one year, he said, before congress attempts to adopt a conscription program.

Compromise Talked A delay in congressional debate on peacetime conscription appeared likely today, in view of "compromise" talk designed to avert a stiff floor fight.

While John L. Lewis, CIO president, and Senator Taft (R-Ohio) joined the opposition to compulsory military training, Senator Barkley (D-Ky.), the majority leader, said that he favored giving members time to study the issue.

Barkley made it clear that he personally approved of some sort of a conscription program, but his comment raised the possibility that the senate might not take up Wednesday the Burke-Wadsworth bill, as originally planned.

In the house, influential Democrats said that they wanted to "make haste slowly" with the manpower phases of the defense program. The house military committee will resume hearings tomorrow on the conscription legislation, with Secretary of War Stimson as a witness some time this week.

CLOVERHILL DAIRY IS HIGHEST IN GUERNSEY CHECK IN FOUR STATES

The highest score ever given to a Golden Guernsey Dairy in the four states of Oregon, Washington, Idaho and Utah has just been accorded Wing's Cloverhill dairy here, according to Charles A. Wing, owner and operator. The score was given last week by C. A. Smith, inspector of all producer-distributors in the Golden Guernsey organization in the northwest, following his careful check of the Wing plant southwest of this city.

The inspection, which is even more exacting than city, state and federal requirements, is arrived at with a score of 42 points for equipment, care of utensils, general appearance, condition and repair of buildings, ventilation of dairy structures and general health of herds. Wing's Cloverhill Dairy made a clean sweep of points in this classification.

Methods employed in handling dairy operations account for 58 points in the exacting Golden Guernsey inspection, according to Mr. Wing, and the Cloverhill Dairy scored 57½ points in this check. The nearest approach to the record of the local dairy in the four states was made by a well known institution located at Salt Lake City, Utah. A high tribute was paid to the local Golden Guernsey member-dairy by Inspector Smith.
