

'SPLITZKRIEG' FOR UNITED STATES IF BRITAIN DEFEATED

Babson Sees Later Nazi Effort to Split Country On Racial, Economic Lines

San Francisco, Aug. 16.—(AP)—The United States can look forward to a Nazi "splitzkrieg" which "always precedes the blitzkrieg" if Germany wins over England, Roger Babson, economic analyst, told the Commonwealth club in a luncheon address today.

Nazi triumph over Britain, Babson said, would have these effects on the lives and bread of the American people:

1. Personal freedom would be threatened throughout the world as it is in Europe. He said Hitler would try to remove free men from his world of slaves.

2. Fifth column strife would hit the United States, in an attempt to split the country along racial and economic lines, to "prolong the inevitable depression" and tear down institutions, economy and unity.

3. Propaganda and economic drives in Latin America would aim at splitting the Americas, crippling the influence and trade of the United States and establishing free German trade.

4. Germany, with allies, would attempt to control world trade routes by force or other means. The Nazis might either use gold in international trade, if they could get it, or reject it as a currency base to force concessions.

A stalemate, Babson said, would raise American taxes, reduce the influence of the middle class, concentrate government powers, reduce freedom, including that of labor unions, bring more severe competition in world trade and lower the American standard of living through competition with bankrupt countries and their poorly-paid labor.

A British victory would preserve personal liberty, probably save the United States from a Nazi "splitzkrieg," strengthen capitalism, and give gold a new lease on life as international money.

Oregon's Own and Only Sugar Salutes ROSEBURG In the Umpqua Valley

It's a long jump from the great timber stands of the vast Umpqua Valley — the biggest in all Oregon — to Eastern Oregon's sugar beet fields, but the ties that bind these two sections are real. Both produce millions of dollars in exportable products to enrich our state. In Umpqua Valley it's timber, fruit, fish, and poultry.

Here, also, nature's beauty is unsurpassed in a land of timbered slopes, sparkling mountain streams and jewel-set lakes where fish and game run riot in a sportsmen's paradise. Roseburg says: If it's a vacation you want, come to Roseburg... and may we say: "If you want sugar, ask for Oregon's own and only White Satin!"
