

Gala Northwest Jackson County Fair Saturday To Attract Throngs

PLANS ARE MADE TO SERVE 3,000 AT FREE BARBECUE

Parade, Exhibits, Contests and Games On Big Calendar of Gold Hill Event.

Gold Hill, Aug. 29.—(Spl.)—More exhibits, more prizes, more sports and games, more entertainment and a bigger free barbecue dinner—that sums up the annual northwest Jackson county fair to be held here this Saturday.

At the barbecue itself Gold Hill expects to be host to 3,000 persons. Last year, by actual count, 2,500 visitors were served at the barbecue dinner and the fair board is counting on an increase of 500 this year.

Another feature will be the parade Saturday morning at 10 o'clock during which the Queen of the Fair will be crowned.

Wimer Grange Enters Premium prizes for exhibits will be awarded only to exhibitors in the northwest part of the county but non-competitive exhibits from all parts of southern Oregon are welcome.

A new entry in booth competition this year is the Wimer Grange. In addition booths will be entered by the Gold Hill, Live Oak and Sams Valley Granges. The Grange booths will be housed in tents pitched near the spacious dance pavilion.

Livestock, of which a substantial increase is expected, will be judged as before, in the vicinity of the dance pavilion. A large increase is anticipated also in the number of land products entered.

On View Tomorrow Exhibits will be open to public view from 7 to 10 p.m. Friday and all day Saturday excepting for the period of the street parade. Judging will be done Friday afternoon so that winning exhibits will carry their premium ribbons Friday night and Saturday. All exhibits must be in place by 2 p.m. Friday. All entries excepting live stock will be judged Friday afternoon. Livestock will be judged Saturday morning. All exhibitors are to register at the office of the Gold Hill News.

Arts and hobbies will be exhibited in the News building, minerals next door in the Oregon Ore Reductions building, flowers in city hall, textiles and canned goods in the L.O.O.F. hall. Cash totaling $750 will be awarded as exhibit premiums. In addition there will be many other prizes for entrants in the parade and to winners of games and contests.

Saturday's schedule: 10:00 a. m.—Parade, with floats, humorous entries, costumed adults and children, pets, organizations, Gold Hill accordion band and non-competitive entries from towns outside the district.

Barbecue at 8:30 1:30 p. m.—Sports program with all kinds of games and contests for young and old.

3:00 p. m.—Dance in the pavilion, this being an added feature.

5:00 p. m.—Musical program on the lawn at city hall.

6:30 p. m.—Barbecue, with menu of barbecued beef, potatoes, brown gravy, bread and butter, pickles, cheese, coffee and cream. Guests are asked to bring their own service; everything else will be provided free.

9 to 2—Dance, with Glenn Hamilton's orchestra of Grants Pass.

Queen of the Fair is Miss Ina Pearl Lucas of Sams Valley Grange. Her princesses are the Misses Virginia Centers, Gold Hill Garden club; Edith Howes, Gold Hill Grange; Charlotte Carter, Live Oak Grange, and Geneva Moore, Wimer Grange. The coronation ceremony will be held during the parade in the center of town. A. A. Walker to give the address. Mayor R. G. Wigle will turn over the city to the city of William Howes, general fair chairman.

Chairmen Listed Other fair board executives are John Gray, vice chairman, Mrs. Cleo Gilchrist, secretary, and Mrs. Paul Force, treasurer. Committee chairmen, who also are members of the fair board, are H. D. Force, parade, Wallace Iverson and Everett Rosecrans, afternoon program and dances, Jack Pinkerton, Mrs. Jeannette Greer and Mrs. A. A. Walker, barbecue, Otto Fuhrman, land products; Mrs. Vaughn Whitmore, canning and home cooking, Mrs. H. D. Force, textiles, Mrs. Paul Throne, flowers, Mrs. Nellie Reed, arts and hobbies, John Gray, livestock, and Mrs. Walter McLean, queen's float.

At the National Capitol Building

ord. Mr. Wallace and it will be his task to defend it whenever Senator McNary undertakes to point out its defects, which the senator plans doing. He gave a sample at the Oregon state fair grounds in his acceptance speech.

In that speech Senator McNary asserted that in the seven years of the new deal the farmers' annual income was only seven billion dollars (mostly contributed by the government) and in the year 1939 the farmers' share of the national income was the lowest since statistics have been kept. The senator said the seven prosperous Republican years (which include the black year of 1921) saw the farmer income reach 12 billion dollars.

Sometimes during the campaign, Mr. Wallace must attempt to explain why the farm income has been so decreased, despite the federal treasury contributing substantially to bolster it.

THE vulnerable spots in the new deal agricultural policy will receive attention from Oregon's "Chasey Mac" in a speech which he will deliver in the mid-west in a few weeks. The senator intends, if possible, keeping Mr. Wallace on the defense and explaining, which is always an awkward position for a candidate to be placed in.

His own voting record is a tower of strength, and Senator McNary has no alibi to make.

THOSE who look for oratorical pyrotechnics from the Wallace-McNary controversy will be disappointed. Neither the senator nor the secretary is a spellbinder and neither can be classified as a rabble rouser. They are deliberate speakers, rarely lifting their voice above a conversational pitch, and are unburied, placid talkers. What they depend on is the meat in their statements, their facts and arguments rather than rip-roaring Fourth of July oratory. Farmers listening to the talks on the radio will be given clear statements without any excitement; they will not be of the pep talk character.

Senator McNary is aware of the material advantages possessed by Mr. Wallace but he also knows that the record of the new deal can be ridiculed by an unbiased presentation. This was illustrated when he absolved the secretary of responsibility for the trade treaties which were detrimental to agriculture.

AN even greater weapon possessed by Mr. Wallace are the hundreds of millions of dollars—yes, billions—which he has distributed in the past in benefits, and which the department is preparing to mail in checks during the final weeks of the campaign. Included in the dozens of statisticians who can provide, on a moment's notice, any information Mr. Wallace may wish to use to combat statements of Senator McNary.

PERHAPS the most effective weapon of the Oregon statesman is the new deal record in handling agriculture. The record cannot be expunged nor altered. Principally responsible for the administration re-

Cormorants Are Making Good Catches at Lake

If it isn't one thing to plague the fisherman, it's a few other things. Right now it's a flock of 15 cormorants up at Fish Lake. If these big, voracious birds keep up the pace they've been setting, there may be no fish left in the lake for the sportsmen.

Because of the drain made upon it for irrigation, Fish Lake is lower now than it has been in years. It is so low, as a matter of fact, that the cormorants can catch fish at will. Attendees at the lake estimate that each of the 15 cormorants is taking 400 to 500 eastern brook trout out of the lake daily. If the multiplication table hasn't been revised lately, that means the flock is doing away with 6,000 to 7,500 fishes every day. If a fisherman were greedy enough to catch even a small fraction of that number, he would get pinched as a law violator. Cormorants, however, are immune to arrest.

Before any reader dismisses this as sheer exaggeration, be it remembered that cormorants do not eat fish voraciously and have become the emblem of gluttony. Hence a greedy or gluttonous person is called a cormorant.

And these cormorants devour not only the small trout. They have been seen flying off with large ones that extend out the sides of their beaks.

As one cormorant flew away the other day, a leader was seen hanging from its beak. The theory was that a fisherman's line had broken, the fish had made off with the leader and the cormorant had made off with the fish. Just what the cormorant thought about it all when it woke up with a fish-hook stuck into its innards has not been learned.

Cormorants are sometimes trained to catch fish, a band being placed about their necks so they can't swallow. Such procedure, however, would probably be against the Oregon sportsmen's code of ethics, if not the Oregon law itself. But if it could be done, fishermen would probably have less difficulty in catching the limit and thus there would be less need for lame excuses. Maybe the cormorant has some use after all.

Wall St. Reports

New York, Aug. 29.—(AP)—Selected stocks kept on the rallying route in today's market but many leaders were side-tracks.

Dealings slackened appreciably on the failure to extend Wednesday's recovery and transfers for the full proceedings were around 175,000 shares against 381,000 yesterday.

Business news was credited with boosting quotations for individual issues as well as limiting selling throughout. Helpful was a jump in last week's railway freight loadings to a new peak for the year.

United Aircraft edged forward, along with several aviation stocks, when announcement was made that the company had been granted a $160,000,000 order for army-navy plane engines.

Accorded support were Boeing, Sperry, Glenn Martin, Montgomery Ward, Sears Roebuck, North American, DuPont, Bullard, N. Y. Central and Johns-Manville.

Backward were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, General

Bread Spiced Peach Jam Radishes Chilled Melon Coffee (Hot or Iced)

French Toast 1 egg or 2 yolks 1/4 cup milk 1/4 teaspoon granulated sugar 1/4 teaspoon salt 3 slices bread or leftover toast 3 tablespoons fat (bacon suggested) 1 tablespoon confectioner's sugar

Best egg, milk and seasonings in a shallow dish—like a soup dish. Dip the bread quickly into this mixture and then place it in the fat, heated in a frying pan. Cook over moderate heat until well browned. Carefully turn and brown the other sides. Sprinkle with the confectioner's sugar and arrange, with edges overlapping—on a heated platter. Serve.

Gingerbread 1/4 cup fat (lard is fine) 1/4 cup granulated sugar 1 egg 1/4 cup molasses 1/4 cup water (or sweet milk) 1 teaspoon cinnamon 1/4 teaspoon ginger 1/4 teaspoon nutmeg 1/4 teaspoon cloves 1/4 teaspoon salt 1 1/4 cups flour 1/4 teaspoon soda 1/4 teaspoon baking powder

Cream fat and sugar. Add other ingredients and beat well. Pour into a shallow pan lined with waxed paper. The batter should be about an inch thick in the pan. Bake 20 minutes in a moderate oven. Closing time for Too Late to Classify Ads is 1:30 p. m.
