Shirley Temple In Rollicking Picture On Craterian Bill

Chock full of fun, songs and dances, "Young People," which stars Shirley Temple, Jack Oakie and Charlotte Greenwood, gave audiences at the Craterian theatre a rollicking good time last night. "Young People" is Shirley Temple's twenty-second picture and it is her happiest hit. In it Shirley sings five grand tunes written by Mack Gordon and Harry Warren: "Fifth Avenue," "Tra-la-la-la," "I Wouldn't Take a Million," "The Mason-Dixon Line" and "Young People."

The story pattern concerns two small-time vaudeville entertainers, Oakie and Greenwood, who adopt Shirley. She grows up with them on the stage, but they decide the stage is not the place to raise children, so they retire to a small New England farm. The denouement comes when Shirley, in an attempt to put over a sophisticated revue at the annual school performance, is booted off the stage by the shocked and indignant parents. The supporting program of short subjects has a new Walt Disney technicolor cartoon, "Put Put Troubles," featuring Donald Duck and Pluto; also a Grantland Rice Sportlight, a colored science reel.
