FORM LETTERS BY U. S. GOVERNMENT ARE GIVEN JOLT

By Jack Stinnett

Washington—Occasionally, a word dropped here has strange repercussions. Because a Texas reader had more than passing interest in one of these columns, there is a new way of doing things in the office of Herbert E. Gaston, assistant secretary of the treasury.

It happened this way: In those days when the Nazis were blitzkrieging France and the Red Cross was bemoaning the fact that money from its current campaign was not readily available, the Texas wrote the treasury department with a plan for financing immediate Red Cross aid.

The letter went into Gaston's office, where thousands of letters are received daily.

One of Gaston's assistants read it and answered with one of those form letters— you know, 202A—something to the effect that "Your suggestion has been received and filed for consideration by the proper authority."

The Texas was a bit miffed but did nothing about it until he ran across one of these columns, in which the story of James F. Grady was told—the man who is slowly revolutionizing contact of government departments with the public by teaching thousands of clerks and assistants how to write courteous and intelligent letters.

The Texas wrote Grady, stating his case and saying that here seemed to be a splendid example of how not to answer a courteous suggestion.

Grady, knowing Gaston personally, telephoned him with the idea of ribbing him, but Gaston refused to rib. He insisted that Grady have a talk with him.

The talk lasted a couple of hours and as a result there's a new set-up in Gaston's office. Things aren't done there any more as they used to be done and the gentlemen in Texas will be happy to know that nobody else will catch form 202A if he writes in with a good suggestion.
