

LIFE OF SERVICE POLING'S ADVICE TO SENIOR CLASS

167 Receive Diplomas in Impressive Commencement at Medford High School

Dr. Dan Poling, contacts representative of the Oregon State System of Higher Education, urged the graduating class of Medford High school last night to "do things that are fine and strong for themselves and others in order to give to society their best contributions as future citizens of America." He told the 167 seniors "to love their country and give it the best you have in order that America may always be a leader in the world."

A speaker at graduation exercises in Medford 21 years ago, Dr. Poling stressed the point that education at that time was the same as modern day schooling, a foundation of all other training, qualifying students to make contacts with society and prepare them for solving problems of adult life.

Personality Formed
He cited personality as the greatest asset of men and women and said that education is the outstanding factor in forming personality. Dr. Poling expanded on the thought that personality consists of three parts: the person that strangers observe, the person that friends know and the person that the individual himself sees by inner study of his own life.

In closing he urged the graduating class to always make the best impression possible at all times, to hold to and make stronger friendships and to be master of himself in order to face the world of tomorrow.

Invocation and benediction were led by the Rev. Wolford Dawes. Music during the evening included: "Triplet" by Leonard, by the trumpet trio; "Lift Thine Eyes Elijah," by Mendelssohn, by the girls sextette; "Dedication," by Franz and "Battle of Jericho," by Ditt, by the boys' quartet.

Diplomas Presented
Dr. Poling was introduced by E. H. Hedrick, superintendent of the Medford schools. The diplomas were presented to the seniors individually by N. H. Franklin, chairman of the board of education for district No. 49. L. B. Mayfield, principal of the high school, announced the following awards:

POTENTIAL SITES ARE TESTED FOR ROGUE BASIN DAMS

The first diamond drilling to test foundations for potential dam sites located in the current federal reclamation bureau survey of the Rogue river basin was begun this week by a four-man crew which arrived from near Chester, Mont., where it has been testing the Marias project, Engineer D. M. Forester announced today.

The crew, equipped with $9,000 worth of black industrial diamonds for its drill bits, began digging the first of 11 holes at the Debenger gap site, located on the Rogue river one mile north of Dodge bridge, near where the Gold Hill cutoff road enters the Crater Lake highway. The 11 holes will be bored from 100 to 200 feet into what may be solid rock, the job probably taking until July. If results of these holes warrant further investigation, 27 more holes will be drilled.

Thereafter the drilling crew, headed by Ray C. Gossepp, will test other sites, including those for dams which would supply the Illinois valley and Merlin area with water.

Testing of sites on the Applegate river and Bear creek is to be done by the army engineering corps, as part of its cooperation with the survey, Forester said. The test drilling is done to determine the depth of the rock, the kind of rock, and its soundness, that is, whether or not it contains cracks and fissures.
