Honored with a birthday dinner at the Hotel Medford Friday evening was "Archie" Thurlow of Portland who flew from the rose city to Medford to celebrate his 91st birthday with his son and family, Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Thurlow, 32 Ross court.

Following is an editorial which appeared in the Portland Oregonian, Friday:

"It is a very great pleasure to relate that Argumento Thurlow, sometimes called 'Archie,' and other times, 'Dad,' is 91 years old today. In November of this year he will have rounded out 67 years as an employee of the Powers Furniture company, and it follows most naturally that not only is his birthday an occasion at the store but quite generally throughout the city.

"When we think of the times through which 'Dad' Thurlow has passed, the transitions and changes to which he has been witness, and how youthful his outlook is to this very day, we confess to something of awe. He seems, indeed, the veritable Father William of Southey's poem in tribute to hale old age—except, we observe, that 'Dad' Thurlow is even more sprightly of spirit.

"The Oregonian believes that it speaks for a great many people, all of them friends of his, when it congratulates Mr. Thurlow on his 91st birthday, and wishes him many more of them. And while congratulations are in order, it seems as well to congratulate the Powers organization, too, of which this serene and competent old gentleman—'gentleman' is exactly the word—has so long been a member."
