For all time
THESE THINGS ARE AMERICA

WE'RE beginning to understand Mark Twain's oldtimer who nearly burst with pride to be the first man hanged in Dogtooth County—by popular request. Last year Standard distributed nine million magnificent color prints—character studies of the rugged and lovable West. It was a thumping job. But now we're at it again—by popular request.

This is by no means a completely commercial enterprise. True, this Company profits whenever more tourists go to see the escarpments of Yosemite... or Mr. Hood's snowy cap... or the endless coloration of the Grand Canyon... or anything else we've pictured. It's no new thing for us to "plug" the West.

Yet there's more to it than that. A nation's roots are in its soil. In miniature, in spirit, these pictures—available free at any Standard Station, Authorized Distributor, or Standard Oil Dealer—represent the everlasting ground in which all our roots take hold. They deserve a place in every American home.

Wherefore, Standard considers distribution of these new portraits of the West another exercise in good citizenship. Some, the prints may lead to see and be thrilled by their majestic originals. To everyone they will bring new appreciation of our common homeland—a deeper realization of why Americans love America.
