Thrilling Drama Of Indian Ocean Pearl Diving Booked Here

The Rialto Theatre announces the booking of the sensational real-life nature adventure film, "The Shark Woman" at the Main street theatre to open Thursday for a three day run. Filmed entirely in the Indian Ocean, the amazing picture reveals the lives of the native pearl divers on the Malaysian Island—a part of the many shark-infested islands located in the Indian Ocean.

The story tells of the hazards faced everyday by the men who earn their living by diving for pearls in the briny deep. In this particular island it is tribal custom that what the man does the woman must also do to prove her loyalty and devotion. The story takes a young native out to sea on a pearl diving expedition with his new found love stowed away on board with his younger brother. On arrival at the pearl beds the young brother is lost overboard and devoured by a man-eating shark. The young adonis leaps over the side of the boat and with knife in hand swims after the shark to get his revenge by death. His brave young sweetheart follows him and together they battle the shark and in a climax that is far more thrilling than anything fiction can conceive, they subdue the giant man-eater.

A highlight of the film is said to be a battle between a mighty octopus and a man-eating shark, filmed under water and shown on the screen as a portion of the film, "The Shark Woman". Attention is also called to the display of island relics in Adrienne's North Central Street window loaned by Dorothy Pruitt of Medford who gathered the articles on a trip to the Indian Ocean with her husband a few years ago. Most discussed is the Malayolotol shark on display there. It is the most unusual specie of shark in that it has scales—but the real authenticity of its type is left entirely to the imagination.

"Meet John Doe" Here Wednesday

Walter Brennan is one of the chief supporting players with Gary Cooper in Frank Capra's "Meet John Doe," which opens a four-day run tomorrow at the Craterian Theatre. Produced and directed by Capra, with the screen play by his equally famous collaborator, Robert Riskin, "Meet John Doe" tells the story of a poor, young man fighting for a popular idea. He is a typical American and like "Mr. Deeds" he has an inestimable amount of difficulty trying to get his idea across without people thinking him slightly touched in the head. Barbara Stanwyck is co-starred with Cooper, with Edward Arnold, Spring Byington, Gene Lockhart and many other favorites also featured.
