Wall St. Report
New York, July 22.—(AP)—The stock market today acted as though it couldn't stand prosperity.

At any rate, cashing in on yesterday's sharp bulge was in evidence throughout the session and became more pronounced in the final hour. The result was that early advances running to a point or so for favorites were cut or transformed into declines in many instances at the close.

Business prospects, brokers said, remained as the principal speculative and investment stimulant. Bolstering factors also were seen in the persistence of inflationary psychology, hopes price restriction legislation would not be too severe, and wishful thinking about the ability of the reds to withstand the Nazi Russian thrust. Transfers were around 1,400,000 shares.
