HEALTH TALKS

HOW TO GET WELL
Some people believe that herbs are the means of attaining health; others hunt for health in a spoon full of liquid, or special diets, baths, climate, mental attitude and hundreds of other means. A famous authority has stated that health is the result of normal function of all body organs and tissues. It is reasonable then to believe that a number of necessary things enter into the problem of maintaining health—clean air and sunshine, good food, sufficient sleep, exercise, a perfect co-ordination of function between organs and tissues. It is the function of co-ordination that depends upon the nervous system. Any structural change of the body that interferes with the flow of nerve energy will change the "tuning" of organic functions, and ill health is the result. Chiropractors have spent almost half a century studying this particular phase of "disease-cause" and find that it plays an important part in almost every sickness. To neglect the nervous system in regaining health is to overlook one of the most important factors. And it is to this neglect, we Chiropractors believe, that there is so much chronic sickness today.

News Behind The News

time union chief. Last June 30, Mr. Hillman succeeded in persuading Labor Secretary Frances Perkins into certifying the problem to the board.

The board wired the union, asking it not to strike. The union agreed. Hearings were ordered by the board to be held by a panel of three men who were not even full board members, only alternates. The panel was composed of the secretary of the CIO, James D. Carey, Chief Justice Walter P. Stone of North Carolina and Charles E. Adams, a business man, chairman of the Air Reduction Corp. Hearings were held July 7 to 14. Of the 13 points in dispute, 12 were settled, leaving only the closed shop issue.

The fact never got out, but the panel split 2 to 1 on that point. Mr. Adams vigorously dissenting. As all these government actions are supposed to be taken unanimously, and unanimity in the panel was impossible, the panel dumped the problem back on the full board. A five hour session was held here, and the mediation board could not agree.

As the potato was getting hotter all the time, the mediation board passed it back to the panel again. Immediately stories started reaching the press from authoritative quarters that Mr. Roosevelt would take over the plant. Mr. Hillman had some talks with the strike leader, Mr. Green, and both were working in this direction. So were some influential members of the labor mediation board.

They rallied representatives of four defense agencies (the mediation board, OPM, maritime commission and navy) to call on the president and recommend seizure. He heard them through, but Mr. Roosevelt can also recognize a hot potato too, when he sees it.

Without letting out any of the above cited facts which would have exposed the board, he merely wrote a letter to Mr. Green recommending that the union try again to reach an agreement with the management.

Mediation Board Chairman William H. Davis fumed silently. Mr. Hillman fumed. Mr. Green fumed. Mr. Roosevelt let them smoke, went off to Hyde Park for the week-end, announced there the plant might have to be taken over later, but some more negotiating would have to be tried first.

Meanwhile the strike entered its third week, with $493,000.000 of naval and merchant ship construction in the defense program tied up over the single point of whether the CIO union is to have a maintenance of union contract.

Ginger Rogers Has Top Role in Comedy On Craterian Bill

Ginger Rogers in a gay, sparkling romantic comedy!

That should be good news to the vivacious star's many Medford fans. Certainly audiences at the Craterian theatre, where "Tom, Dick and Harry" had its initial showings yesterday, gave Ginger a rousing welcome in this, her first film since winning the coveted Academy Award for her sterling work in "Kitty Foyle."

The new vehicle is definitely all-out romantic comedy. In fact, Ginger, as a madcap little telephone operator, has three romantic leading men playing opposite her. George Murphy, Alan Marshal and Burgess Meredith are the talented gentlemen who play the title roles and help to complicate the life of the little "hello" girl.

Replete with hilarious situations, smart, punchy dialogue and a great deal of whimsical fantasy, the breezy story revolves around the hectic adventures of a telephone girl who allows herself to become engaged to three men at the same time.

Eddie Albert With Joan Leslie Appear In Rialto's Comedy

"Thieves Fall Out", the oft-told comedy hit starring Eddie Albert and Joan Leslie, comes to the Rialto theatre for tomorrow and Wednesday only with Jane Darwell and Alan Hale in supporting roles. The co-stars of "The Wagons Roll at Night" play two young people who are buffeted about by fate, but who manage nevertheless to find happiness and a future together. Albert, star of many comedy hits, is cast as a young man who sells a valuable legacy in order to set himself up in the housekeeping business. Things don't pan out too well, and gangsters step in, demanding the quick payment of a mere $75,000! In desperation the lad turns to his grandmother, played by Jane (Ma) Joad in "Grapes of Wrath" Darwell, who manages to straighten things out in her own unique way.

Alan Hale portrays Albert's tight old man, who forbids the young squirt to draw on his legacy but, in a thrilling climax, comes to the front with a grand idea in support of Granny's.
