DEFENSE WORK SPURS HOUSING TO END SLUMS

Government Program Is to Put 750,000 Persons in New Homes, Aide Reveals

San Francisco (U.P.)—The United States is experiencing the greatest migration of families to new homes since covered wagon days, according to Nathan Straus, U. S. housing authority administrator.

The difference between the two migrations, he explained, is that today families are moving into new houses completed to the last mouse trap.

On a flying trip to Pacific coast cities to see what slum districts should be eliminated and why they were not being rebuilt faster than they are, Straus declared his department plans to rehouse 193,000 families or a total of 750,000 people in 444 localities in 39 states and territories.

Small Cities Predominant

Three quarters of these projects, he said, are in cities of fewer than 50,000 population.

"At this moment," he declared, "there is a shortage of 13,000,000 decent dwellings in the United States. We hope to be able to produce some 200,000 fit homes this year.

"Necessarily, some of these will have to be near defense projects and this is going to create a new problem for the future which we are already studying and preparing for. However, I am less concerned about these ghost towns of the future when they will be deserted by the men no longer needed in the defense industry than I am about the ghost town of today."

Cost Rise Is Setback

Straus admitted that the rise in cost of building materials caused by the national defense emergency has set back low cost rent projects but declared the program will be pushed relentlessly.

Priority for building material will be asked only in cases where there is acute shortage of houses for defense workers.

One project under consideration for not slowing up the program during the national defense emergency, is to redesign building projects to substitute frame for structural steel.

Every effort is being made to prevent any increase in rents of the various projects, Straus reported.

Diplomatic Society Is Dead As Five-Power Pact; Mixup Much Too Hot for Hostesses

By Jack Stinnett

Washington—If this had been a "re,ular" World war, there might have been something to report about what goes on in Washington diplomatic circles.

I might have been able to say "Boy-o-boy, how the 'allied' diplomatic corps has taken up the Soviet embassy!" But no such thing has happened, simply because this isn't a "regular" war and because as a result of that there is no such thing as diplomatic society in Washington any more.

Wave and Nod

Once since Nazi Germany started its foray into Soviet Russia, there has been a big society affair attended by His Excellency, Constantine A. Oumansky, and also the Right Honorable the Viscount Halifax, who holds the same title for Great Britain that Mr. Oumansky holds for the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics. Herr Hans Thomsen, "charge d'affaires ad interim" for Germany, was not present. Nor was anyone else who might cause those two diplomantic embarrassment.

Mr. Oumansky and Lord Halifax chatted genially. They smiled and laughed and shook hands and parted with an "I'll-be-seeing-you" wave and nod.

Confused

Behind this simple outward display of social graces is one of the most complicated and confused diplomatic situations this capital ever has seen. A month or so ago, Herr Thomsen and Mr. Oumansky were the best of pals. It officially was "hail-fellow-well-met" whenever their paths crossed.

Today, the relationship of their respective nations demands that any time they come in contact they immediately develop a bad case of diplomatic astigmatism. They neither see nor hear each other and both take the proverbial attitude of the freight train passing the tramp.

Not Simple

This may seem very simple—up to a point. When there was revolution in Spain, for instance—and Germany and Italy were aiding the rebels, there was an understandable coolness between the Spanish ambassador and those of Italy and Germany. When the Soviets marched into Finland, Mr. Hjalmar J. Procope, envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary, didn't go ringing any doorbells at the Russian embassy—and woe be to the hostess who even invited him to the same party, much less seated him in the vicinity of Mr. Oumansky.

Now, however, things are so mixed up that no hostess even gives a party and diplomatic society is as dead as a five-power pact.

Jackson to Take Rocking Chair to Supreme Court

By Jack Stinnett

Washington—When the supreme court reconvenes in October, there will be added to its furnishings one of the strangest articles that the highest judicial body of the land has seen in modern times. It is new Associate Justice Robert H. Jackson's rocking chair.

When the new justice came to Washington seven years ago he brought his rocking chair with him. In it, he would sit and rock and read his briefs. It's just a plain, ordinary rocking chair—no fancier than Grandma used to sit and knit in. But up the political ladder it went with Mr. Jackson. When he was solicitor General, it was in his office and there he would sit and rock and read briefs by the hour. As attorney general, he did not have so much brief reading to do, and the chair went into a little cubby hole several rooms removed from that spacious one where he held his conferences and mapped the policies and fights of the justice department. Still, there were days, many of them, when he slipped away to solve his problems in the old rocker.

As associate justice of the supreme court, there probably will be as much brief reading as the one-time lawyer of Jamestown, N. Y., has ever done—and the story is that he will do most of it from the little old rocking chair that has seen him through to one of the highest judicial posts in the land.

Skewered Meat Squares

1 pound beef
1 pound pork
1 pound veal
1/3 cup flour
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon paprika
¼ teaspoon celery salt
2 tablespoons chopped onions
6 tablespoons fat
½ cup boiling water

Buy lean meat, cut in inch squares. Thread them in alternating kinds on skewers. Place flour, salt, paprika and celery salt in sack, add several skewers at a time, and shake the sack until coated. Brown in fat heated in large frying pan. Cover and cook 10 minutes. Add water and onions, and cook over low heat 25 minutes. Turn for even cooking.

Cucumber Salad

1½ cups diced cucumbers and juice
2 tablespoons lemon juice
½ cup diced celery
¼ cup chopped green peppers
1/3 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon paprika
1 cup cottage cheese
1 teaspoon minced onions
2 teaspoons minced parsley
2 tablespoons catsup
1 cup boiling water
1 package lemon flavored gelatin

Cut cucumbers into small pieces and soften with fork. Add lemon juice, celery, peppers, seasonings and catsup. Add to gelatin dissolved in boiling water. Cool and let thicken slightly. Pour over cheese placed in shallow mold. Chill until firm. Cut in squares, serve on lettuce. Pass dressing.

Fruit Dip

1 cup raspberries
1 cup sliced peaches
1 cup apricots (fresh or canned)
½ cup whipped cream
2 tablespoons orange juice
¼ cup strained honey

Mix and chill and serve in chilled cups.

MRS. BLANCHE POWELL OF MEDFORD AND JACKSON COUNTY AND HER FAMOUS

ROGUE RIVER PEAR CONSERVE

WITH OREGON'S OWN AND ONLY SUGAR

World-famous Rogue River Comice, Bartlett or Bosc Pears and Oregon's own and only sugar combine to make a matchless Pear Conserve, says Mrs. Blanche Powell, well-known and well-liked housewife, clubwoman and business woman of Medford.

Says Mrs. Powell: "I use 'White Satin' sugar in all my canning and cooking, and for every sweetening use, because I consider it to be of the very best quality obtainable and because I believe in things made and grown in Oregon."

ROGUE RIVER PEAR CONSERVE

5 lbs. ripe, firm pears (Bartlett, Comice or Bosc are best)
4 lbs. White Satin Sugar
2 lemons
2 oranges
½ lb. raisins
½ lb. walnut meats, chopped fine

Cut pears into one-inch cubes; grind or chop fine the lemons and oranges (rind also). Combine pears, lemons and oranges, add sugar, simmer slowly for one-half hour, add raisins, add nuts shortly before it is done. Cook mixture slowly for 4 hours. Cool and put in glasses; does not need to be sealed.
