Little Medford Actresses Dedicate Play to British

At 8 o'clock tomorrow night 23 little American girls of Medford will present an adaptation of Barrie's Peter Pan at St. Mark's Guild hall on North Oakdale avenue at Fifth street. There will be laughter and gaiety in the hearts of these little actresses of the Jolly Rogers club but over in England there will be many a child lying patiently in a hospital bed, hoping and praying to recover from the injuries and scars of ugly war.

As they present their whimsical play, the 23 girls of the Jolly Rogers club will be thinking of the little children on hospital cots in England, for it is for their benefit that the Medford youngsters are staging the play. Today these 23 youthful actresses, ranging in age from 8 to 12, made an appeal for a large attendance at their play so that they might be of the greatest assistance possible to the suffering children of England. Tickets may be procured at the door or reserved by telephoning Mrs. Dwight H. Fildley at 3452. Grown-ups who have kept an eye on the Jolly Rogers girls declared the youngsters have put their hearts into long rehearsals for several weeks in order to present a good show, one worth seeing. "We just can't afford to let them down now," said a spokesman in urging a large attendance.

Proceeds from the play will go to Bundles for Britain but the money will be specifically earmarked to maintain two wards for war-injured children in the Royal Free hospital, London. It has been the work of the Jolly Rogers girls to help maintain the wards.

Because of $500 Oregon people have been contributing monthly to Bundles for Britain. England will present a special short-wave radio broadcast of thanks at 8:25, Pacific time, tonight. The program is titled "London Calling Oregon." The broadcast can be picked up here on 31 meters.
