MEDFORD COLDER THAN PARK AREA

For the second consecutive day, it was warmer today at 7,100-foot high Crater Lake national park than in the Medford lowland.

Minimum temperature at the lake during the night was 29 degrees as contrasted with Medford's 21. The season's accumulated foot of snow in the park had melted to only patches. The weather in the park was clear and bright. It was suggested that Medford people might find it a novelty to motor to the lake to get warm.
