

INFLUENZA GOES ON MARCH AGAIN; AIDS ARE LISTED

Health Officials Are Keeping War Eye on Trend—1918 Wave Recalled.

Washington—Flu is on the march again. So health officials, mindful of the savage onslaught of the mysterious malady during the World war, are keeping a wary eye on the situation.

The number of cases being reported to the U. S. public health service is running almost three times as high as it was a year ago when the winter wave developed into the most extensive epidemic since 1929.

Warning Given

If the influenza curve should rise at the rate it did last winter when a peak of 383,000 new cases for the four weeks ended January 25 was reached, the outbreak probably would be the largest since 1920.

Earlier this year a few doctors and bacteriologists warned of the possibility of an epidemic similar in scope and severity to the great pandemic of 1918-1919. They said last winter's epidemic which traveled eastward might get a foothold among war-weakened European peoples and return in more virulent form to this country.

Suggestions

So far, however, there is no indication of anything hitting us comparable to the explosive World war outbreak of the disease when between August, 1918, and June, 1919, there were an estimated 25,000,000 to 27,000,000 cases and more than 500,000 deaths from influenza and pneumonia in this country.

The public health service suggests these precautions for home treatment of influenza:

1. Call a doctor.
2. Go to bed immediately. Stay there for several days after fever goes. Relapse is frequent and dangerous.
3. Liquid diet first few days, soft food about the fourth day. Drink plenty of water.

4. Avoid cathartics; enemas are better than laxatives.
5. Use disposable tissues for nasal and bronchial secretions.
6. Excessive sweating is dangerous. A warm bath permissible at onset to relieve back, head and limb pains, but a warm drink and warm bed are essential immediately afterward.

Good nursing and rest in bed help stave off complications. Patients generally should be isolated; old people especially need protection against all possible sources of infection.

Minor Girl Custody Given Grandmother

In an opinion handed down last week by Circuit Judge H. K. Hanna the custody of Gayle Nelson, a minor girl, is awarded to her grandmother, Mrs. Clara H. Kent of Butte Falls.

The opinion denies the habeas corpus proceedings instituted last July by Ralph Nelson of Tacoma, Wash., who sought the custody of the minor. The case has been pending since last summer, when a hearing was held in the habeas corpus proceedings. Nelson was represented by Attorney George M. Roberts, and Mrs. Kent by Attorney W. M. McAllister.
