

HOLLY DEALERS LICENSE NEEDED

Salem, Dec. 19.—(P)—Cut greenery, such as Christmas trees, huckleberry and mistletoe, may be sold legally without a nurseryman's license, but if such sales include holly, the seller must have a $10 dealer's license, the state department of agriculture said today.

Any person having a holly tree in his back yard may sell up to $50 worth of holly without a license provided he does not display or advertise the holly. Holly, one of the state's large nursery crops, is subject to pests and diseases, and for that reason comes under the license law.

HUNTERS PROSPER Baker, Ore., Dec. 19.—(P)—Private coyote hunters are enjoying the season this year more than ever before. The hunters are getting $7 for every good pelt they secure. The government uses the pelts to make fur lined flying suits and other combat clothing. The coyote crop in eastern Oregon is especially good this year and the price per pelt is $3 higher than last season.
