Olympia, Dec. 20.—(AP)—A frantic mother here today sought to evacuate her young son by parcel post.

How large a package, asked the woman of Postmaster Jesse Leverich, can be sent by parcel post?

"Up to 70 pounds in weight and 100 inches in length," replied Leverich.

"Can live things be sent?" "Queen bees, non-poisonous insects, day-old chicks, etc., almost anything that isn't poisonous and can't bite the handlers," Leverich read from the postal regulations.

"Could I send my little boy, then? I want to send him to Iowa where he will be safe," she said.

The postmaster gulped, scratched his head and talked fast to convince the mother she should use some means other than parcel post for that purpose.

REGISTER HORSES, MULES ON COAST

San Mateo, Calif., Dec. 20.—(AP)—It's registration time for all horses and mules on the west coast, between 3 and 10 years old.

Lieut.-Col. F. W. Koester, in charge of the war department's western remount area headquarters here, in calling today for such registration, said the census of animals of a useful military age "is simply a most desirable step in our defense preparations," and that it is not a draft of animal resources.

"Experience of the present war shows the horse and mule still are essential for a variety of uses in modern armies," Colonel Koester said.
