

Salvation Army in Final Plea for Aid In Christmas Food

A final plea for a generous offering was asked by the Salvation Army today of all in fortunate circumstances so that those less fortunate may nevertheless enjoy a happy Christmas.

Contributions thus far have been gratifying but far from adequate to pay for the many baskets of food the Salvation Army will distribute among poor families in Jackson county, said Adjutant Charles K. Cox, chief executive here, in pleading for a final manifestation of generosity.

"Drop a good-sized coin in our kettles or the tins at various stores throughout the county or mail your contribution directly to the Salvation Army," Adjutant Cox pleaded. "Upon your generosity depends the Christmas happiness of many Jackson county families, for our Christmas baskets are financed entirely by these contributions."

ALBERTA KNIPS SAFE IN HAWAII

Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Knips of Oak Grove Road were today in receipt of a letter from their daughter, Alberta, informing them that she was well and fulfilling her duties as an army nurse in Hawaii.

Miss Knips, who has been in Hawaii at Schofield Barracks since last July and is rated a second lieutenant, went through the sudden Japanese attack on the islands December 7. The letter to her parents was written the following Sunday, but it was not postmarked in Honolulu until December 17. The letter had to pass the post censor.

"One week has gone by and things are almost back in the old routine," Miss Knips wrote. "You can take off your hats to Uncle Sam's soldier boys. There is not another lot in the world. Nobody will ever take their spirit or sense of humor away from them."

"Don't worry about me. I am okay. Say hello to everyone for me."

SOLDIERS' FOLKS MUST BE PATIENT

Parents should not feel concerned if they do not hear from their sons after two weeks from their sons after they have entered the armed forces of the United States, a father told the Mail Tribune today.

Saying that he knew of a number of mothers who worried because they did not hear immediately from their boys, the father pointed out that there are so many routine things to do and so many transfers from one place to another to be made that the new soldier or sailor has little time or opportunity to write until he gets settled at his permanent station. So the father, who did not hear from his own son until ten days after he had left here, advised parents to be patient.

Crew members of the torpedoed tanker Emdio gathered with their captain (hands folded), after they had been brought to safety at Eureka, Calif. Captain Clark A. Farrow and 31 survivors, five of them injured when an enemy submarine torpedoed the Emdio, were taken aboard a Coast Guard ship.

Civilian Defense Set-Up Explained by Coordinator

The following is the second of a series of informational articles on civilian defense prepared by Frank Hull, coordinator of the Jackson County Council of Defense:

FIRE

The protection from fire by incendiary and demolition bombs is one of the most important and most urgent to be understood by the public and the civilian defense.

In England every man, woman and child function as firemen first. All other activities such as rescue, Red Cross, shelter and protection are supplemental to fire. In England the fire protection group consists of four to five people. A small hand pump, four ordinary pails of water, a shovel and a long hoe are utilized. Full instructions will be given on how they operate later.

The reason for the necessity of all participating in fire-fighting is obvious when you understand that one airplane loaded with incendiary bombs can drop a series of bombs every 20 seconds over an area three miles in length and each and every one of these 1,500 to 2,000 bombs can start a conflagration. Multiply this by several airplanes and you can see that in the space of five minutes' time that an area like Jackson county, including its cities, would be exposed to thousands of fires. Those who have gone through this ordeal have solved the problem of preventing these fires from becoming great conflagrations by the simple method of preventing the bomb from starting the fire.

DAYLIGHT SAVING URGED BY DOWNEY

Washington, Dec. 23.—(AP)—Senator Downey (D-Calif.) wants nationwide daylight saving time for the protection of public welfare and the conservation of essential resources, and he has proposed that the senate put itself on record as of the same mind.

Senator McNary (R-Ore.), however, questioned whether a simple resolution of the nature Downey introduced was in itself enough to authorize setting clocks ahead an hour in each time zone, and whether actual legislation might not be necessary.

For that reason, the senate minority leader objected to immediate consideration of Downey's resolution by which congress would "express approval" of any steps by the president or the war department, acting under wartime powers, to change the time standard.
