ARMY DEVELOPS FIRING CAMERA FOR WARPLANES

Photographs of Battle Pick Out Pilot's Errors—Aid In Training Of Cadets.

Dayton, O.—(U.P.)—An all-seeing camera, attached to the sights of the machine guns of a fighting plane to record the progress of aerial "dog fights" has been developed by the army air corps.

The new apparatus, called a gunsight aiming point camera, recently underwent successful tests at the air corps experimental laboratory, Wright field

Fixed behind the gun sights, it will record action high above the clouds when one pursuit plane jockeys into position "on the tail" of another and sends an imaginary burst of bullets into the quarry.

Used In World War

The use of gun cameras dates back to the first World war, but the ones now in use, like the latest aerial cannon, are far superior to the first equipment. Earlier gun cameras, mounted on machine gun rests necessitated removal of part of a plane's armament.

Today the camera may be carried into actual combat and works simultaneously with the guns to provide a vivid record of the fray.

A recently developed "overrun" device keeps the camera running after the pilot takes his finger off the trigger switch of his guns. He will be able to follow an enemy plane down to its crash when it goes out of control and the camera lens will record the sequence.

Army officials expect this device to help in verifying the destruction of enemy airships.

Electrically Driven

The new GSAP camera is electrically driven, equipped with a 50-foot film magazine, using standard black and white 16 millimeter motion picture film. The pilot can vary the speed with a reset knob and compensate for atmospheric conditions with aperture controls for bright, hazy and dull weather.

In the intense cold of high altitudes the lens may be heated electrically for protection.

The real test of this camera comes a few hours after the aerial action in an air corps class room. The pictures indicate whether pilots would have scored hits on their opponents had they been using "live" ammunition instead of movie film.

Because it was soon discovered that an aviation cadet learns best when he sees the results of his flight the same day, Wright field technicians have developed a nearly automatic processing technique.

Fairbanks, Alaska, Dec. 26.—(AP)—Dr. David Hoehn, Fairbanks physician, was rescued yesterday from an ice-covered lake inside the Arctic circle by Pilot John Cross, leaving only Norman Anthony of the trio forced down eight days ago when ice formed on the wings of their plane.

Previously, Archie Ferguson, pilot of the plane, was flown into Hog river for treatment of a broken arm received when he brought his ship down on the narrow surface of the frozen lake.

Blanche Bates Of Stage Fame Dies

San Francisco, Dec. 26.—(AP)—Blanche Bates Creel, who played many a spectacular stage role and once stopped an incipient panic in a Philadelphia theater, died of a heart attack after a quiet Christmas reception at her home yesterday. She was 69.

In 1923, while appearing in Philadelphia, a fire broke out.

"There's no fire here," she yelled at the audience, "and if there were, what the hell would you do about it?"
