

Barbara Stanwyck and Henry Fonda in New Comedy at Craterian Today

'LADY EVE' STARS RETURN IN 'YOU BELONG TO ME'

Re-uniting Barbara Stanwyck and Henry Fonda, the comedy combination that made "The Lady Eve" one of the most rick-ticking romances of last season, "You Belong To Me" opens today for a three-day showing at the Craterian theatre.

Miss Stanwyck is shown as a woman doctor, seriously absorbed in her career, who becomes the bride of a handsome young playboy socialite. Fonda is the love-crazy husband, sufficiently understanding to recognize why his wife can't stay for breakfast, but failing to understand why her patients are invariably handsome young men who find it a pleasure to say "ah" to his lovely bride.

Hailed by press and theatre audiences as one of the wittiest comedies of the new season, "You Belong To Me" sparkles with wit and which deftly interweaves love and laughter with suspenseful situations and crackling dialogue. "You Belong To Me" has Edgar Buchanan, Roger Clark, Ruth Donnelly and Melville Cooper in the chief supporting roles. Clark is a newcomer to the screen, and promises to make a strong bid for starring honors in the very near future; the others are well-known comedy character players, each with his own record of successes.
