Two Books Reviewed at Study Club

Mrs. W. F. Campbell and Mrs. Eldon Drysdale reviewed two books at the Thursday Morning Study club meeting at the Girls Community clubhouse last week.

"I'd Live It Over" by Flora Cloman was the book selected by Mrs. Campbell. The book concerned the life of a woman born near the copper mines of Montana. Educated by her English father, her life was dominated by a beautiful optimism. A teacher in her early life she married a mining engineer and resided later in Africa where they became wealthy. She was presented to the court of St. James and after her husband's death she lost her wealth and now lives in a small apartment within sight of her former mansion.

No misfortune seemed great enough to diminish her vivacious and friendly outlook according to the author. She completely expressed herself when she said "rich or poor, she felt no different." She liked the same things and the same people, regardless of her position in life.

Allis McKay's story, "They Came To A River" describes the life of a woman born near Wenatchee, Wash., where men were just beginning to visualize the possibility of irrigating the arid Washington land.

Mrs. Drysdale reviewed the planting of the apple orchards, showed how the character was reared near the Columbia river and gained a broad and varied philosophy that all things take care of themselves. The author's ability to create the feelings of her character's first dance, first phonograph record and other experiences relived for the reader the change from early pioneer life to the present day.

Tho' Time Marches, There's Always More to COME

HOW MANY months in a year? Twelve? CORRECT. And 372 months constitute 31 years? Ab-so-LUTE-ly! Which brings us to a customer in California's wave-kissed Laguna Beach who has just paid Standard his 372nd consecutive monthly bill.

At 82, one is entitled to write reminiscent notes on a monthly statement. This customer is 82—and wrote such a note. He personifies a legion of patrons who, over the long haul, have followed the motto "Stick With Standard."

These good people are much more than the pride of our credit manager. They have long assumed that Standard will never lag behind its often brisk competitors. Thus they have presented us with an obligation—never to let our good friends down. For 31 years—and double that time—we've striven to be worthy of such confidence. We've benefited—and you have profited—by this.

For a corporation, as does an individual, can try to live up to the expectations of its friends. One reason we constantly invest money in field development, research, refineries, progress, is this heritage of trust. Another is our determination to live to that our customers new today will be customers still—31 years hence.
