Bean, state public utilities commissioner, at the PUC offices in Salem at 1 p. m. next Monday regarding the Southern Pacific company's abandonment of passenger and mail train service between the Rogue valley and California.

Mr. Bean's letter to the chamber of commerce said that arrangements had been made for the preliminary investigation with general counsel for the railroad and Niel R. More Questions Thought Up For Man in Business

Washington, Jan. 22.—(P)—Filling out government questionnaires is likely to take up a whole of a lot of the average business man's time by the end of 1943. At present, the house appropriations committee was told during hearings on the independent offices supply bill reported today, there are upwards of 7,000 inquiry forms going out to business and the public, and the division of statistical standards expects to review some 2,800 new forms in 1943.

H. S. Deuel's place of business says: "Relax. Next time try the train. S. P. The friendly Southern Pacific." Across the sign someone has written "What train?" Other less daring ways have asked: "When has the Southern Pacific been friendly to the Rogue River valley?"

VALLEY DAIRYMEN PLAN FOR TASK OF SUPPLYING CAMP

1,600 To 1,800 More Cows Needed To Meet 185,000 Gallon Monthly Estimate.

Faced with the necessity of increasing their market milk production by approximately 120 per cent to provide an adequate supply for the army cantonment and increase in civilian population expected in this area, dairymen of the Rogue River valley met in the courthouse last night to make plans for a concerted effort to boost the territory's current production to the point believed necessary.

Frank H. Rowe, representative of the Oregon Milk Control Board, told the gathering that between 1,600 and 1,800 more cows must be diverted to producing market milk if the estimated 185,000 gallons-per-month goal is reached. Right now, he said, between 1,200 and 1,400 of the approximate 16,500 cows in Jackson and Josephine counties are producing market milk.

"In December this district produced 87,000 gallons of market milk," Rowe stated, "and in order to provide the necessary increase of 98,000 gallons I figure 60 new producers will be needed."

The present producers of market milk can increase their production only about 15 per cent, Rowe said he learned in a survey. This figure was confirmed by H. H. Dietrich, spokesman for local producers.

A few dairymen not now producing market milk attended the meeting and pledged to divert their cows to its production, and Rowe issued a call to all others in Jackson and Josephine counties, who desire to cooperate, to get in touch with him at the Farmers' and Fruitgrowers' bank building room 210, as soon as possible.

A committee consisting of H. H. Dietrich, T. L. Goodwin and O. N. Wray of Ashland was appointed by Rowe to canvass the district for potential market milk producers, and to advise with them if they are interested. Distributors and present producers will also attempt to make individual contacts with potential producers in Jackson and Josephine counties.

Costs Discussed

Considerable discussion was held on the costs of installing dairy facilities to meet the requirements and specifications expected to be laid down by the army, and Rowe said he had learned that the PSA would cooperate as much as possible with dairymen desiring to do this. He added that as yet he didn't know what regulations the army would set, but said he believed they would be practically the same as those now in effect here.

Charles W. Austin, city milk inspector, explained fully the requirements for A-grade milk, and added that he believed the necessary production could and would be reached.

G. H. Grover also was confident the valley could produce enough market milk to meet the increased demand, and said "We are obligated to our country to produce that milk if and when it is definitely needed by our boys in uniform."

The proposed defense pool was explained by Rowe, in

TRAFFIC CONTROL SUGGESTIONS ARE SOUGHT BY BOARD

The parking committee of the cantonment civilian coordinating board today said it was "open to suggestions from any interested and responsible source" regarding solution of traffic problems expected to arise when construction is begun on the army camp. At a meeting late yesterday afternoon, the committee arranged for surveys and proposals to govern anticipated situations. From these the committee proposes to make recommendations to the coordinating board and the city council.

"We know from the state highway commission that certain streets in Medford will be one-way streets and that on other streets during rush hours, perhaps, no parking of any kind will be permitted in certain sections," a statement from the committee said.

The meeting yesterday covered the subjects of available parking space and traffic regulations on certain streets to handle the increase in traffic which is expected soon. It was emphasized that the parking problem was of interest to every merchant, farmer and city resident. One suggestion was that arrangements be made wherever possible for private parking space.
