"Prop Nuts" Show Models In Display At Rialto Theatre

Special attention is being called to the interesting model airplane display in the lobby of the Rialto theatre where it will be kept until the opening of the Universal Pictures feature, "Cavalcade of Aviation," which plays Tuesday and Wednesday at the popular show-house. The display was arranged through the courtesy of the local model airplane club, the "Medford Prop Nuts," with Allan Buckingham, one of the more active members, in charge.

Fourteen model airplanes depicting the cavalcade of aviation from the Wright Brothers' first plane to the present-day bombers are shown in this outstanding array of young America's talents in modeling and carrying out distinctive designs in air planes, for it is a conceded fact that many of today's inventions are a direct credit to the genius of these youngsters who design and build model airplanes.
