Colorful Pictures of Pacific Islands Open Armchair Cruise

Colorful pictures of Hawaii and the Philippine Islands gave spectators at the first of a series of "armchair cruise" meetings at the Girls Community clubhouse last evening an inside view of the beauty and geography of the Pacific islands. Mrs. David D. Roberts, assisted by her husband, D. D. Roberts, presented an interesting talk on the Pacific islands, and presented moving pictures taken by their son, Richard Roberts, who is with the U. S. air corps in the far Pacific.

The pictures have been taken over a period of several years and showed among other interesting sights sunset scenes, the shore line of many islands, the "March of the Virgins to the Shrine" and Hilo Hattie and her troupe of entertainers performing on the beach at Honolulu for the benefit of island visitors.

Mrs. Roberts, who visited in Honolulu with her son several years ago, spoke of the pleasant and lovable character of the Hawaiian. She said that there are 1,114 islands in the Hawaiian group, the largest of which is Hawaii. She described the hula dance as a pantomime of music and art and explained interesting facts concerning the many types of leis worn by residents and visitors on the islands.

Among the many buildings pictured were the Pan American building, Royal Hawaiian Hotel, Mormon temple, established in 1820, and other scenes included pineapple fields, rice paddies, Diamond Head, the queen's oath tub, Wakaiki beach, street scenes with natives in colorful island dress.

A trip from Honolulu to Manila by air also was shown with a stop at Wake Island where all buildings were destroyed by a typhoon several years ago. Manila was established in 1581 and has grown to an island of strong importance in the western world. Particularly pertinent to modern times was a trip through the West Point of the Philippines, established in 1836 by General Douglas MacArthur. Located at Fort Camp John Hay, high in the mountains, this military school had ready for the U. S. government 12 well trained divisions which were turned over to the U. S. government at the outbreak of the war.

Mention was made of Jose Rizal, founder of the American school in the Philippines and also known as George Washington of the islands. A talented man, his abilities included education, painting, author, physician, politics and many other talents.

The pictures closed with a stop at a Moro island where the "March of the Virgins to the Shrine" was depicted. Also interesting was the home of the Moro chieftain which was built entirely of mahogany and situated in the center of his village.

Mrs. Roberts showed several articles sent to her from China, the Philippines and Hawaii, including silver spoons, Manila perfume, fine linen and a pocketbook made from crushed
