DEAFNESS—HEAD NOISES
Deafness and head noises place a strain upon the whole nervous system. The greater the degree of deafness and the more irritating the noises the greater is the strain. With these lesions or overcome nearly all would be in better health. You cannot be on a nervous tension trying to hear and expect to be in your other wise state of health. Often these conditions can be improved or corrected by proper treatment. Otherwise the proper "hearing aid" is of great benefit. In selecting a "hearing aid" instrument be sure it does not transmit foreign noises to your ear, also that it properly fits your particular ear, and that its tone as well as volume is under proper control. Personalized service costs you no more, and you may hear again with joy.

VOLUNTEERS GIVEN PRACTICAL COURSE IN FIRE FIGHTING

Two groups of voluntary civilian firefighters, under direction of Rogue River National Forest officials, spent several hours in the woods yesterday receiving practical experience in extinguishing fires. The voluntary firefighters are to be called in case serious emergencies arise this summer.

Organized by Bill Lingas, of office manager and Harry Dowson, sales manager a crew of 19 millworkers of Medford Corporation was taken in a forest service truck to Four-Bit creek in the Butte Falls district. The millworkers, making the trip on their own time, were trained in constructing a fire line and in putting out an actual fire by Maurice Tedrow, Rogue River National Forest fire assistant. Foreman of the volunteer crew is C. H. Shrit.

The other volunteer group, composed of members of the Rogue River Sportsmen's club, traveled to the Little Applegate forest camp where Lee Port of the Star ranger station and a group of trained fire-fighters demonstrated the 10-man "one-lick" method of fire fighting, developed and perfected by Ranger McReynolds under supervision of Karl Janouch, Rogue River National Forest supervisor, and Port.

Accompanying this volunteer group were Janouch and H. P. Gaylor, assistant supervisor of the Grand Mesa National Forest in Colorado, here on a special fire control assignment. The Rogue River Sportsmen's club plans to enlist a considerable number of sportsmen as volunteer fire-fighters to assist the regular fire-fighting crews should a critical situation occur. Sportsmen desiring to volunteer may obtain application blanks at the forest service office in the federal building or at Lamport's.
