

ASHLAND YOUTHS SALVAGE TIRE OF WRECKED PLANE

Long Hard Trip To Pilot
Rock Made For Rubber—
Matinee Nets 1,160 lbs.

Glen Wade, 13, and Bernie Helms, 17, both of Route 1, Ashland, can rest assured they have done their part in helping the American war effort.

Following the discovery June 8 of the wreckage of a U. S. army photographic plane which had months earlier crashed head-on into Pilot Rock in the Siskiyou mountains, Glen and Bernie, like many boys in their neighborhood, made the trip to the scene to satisfy their own curiosity.

They remembered that after the army had made its investigation of the wreckage they threw a blown-out tire down into a canyon.

Came the nation's scrap rubber drive and Glen and Bernie decided America could use that discarded tire. So, in their old car, they drove as far as they could and walked the rest of the way—almost three miles through the mountains to reach the tire, then the same distance back to their car. And the tire and hub weighed 45 pounds.

Keep Hub
The two boys took the tire to the Clarence Homes service station just south of Ashland, where it was weighed and the youths paid their 45 cents. Although glad to part with the tire, which they knew would be used in helping lick the Axis,

Glen and Bernie decided to keep the hub as a souvenir of their hard but worthwhile trip.

Kenneth Parrett, county chairman of the petroleum committee in charge of the scrap rubber drive, said today that 1,160 pounds of "very fine" rubber was collected at the Craterian theaters Tuesday morning matinee. All of it was in household articles with a high rubber content, Parrett stated.
