

RED CROSS ROLE IN ARMY'S WORK TOLD BY GENERAL

Gerhardt Speaker at Annual Meeting of Jackson County Chapter—Nominations

The vital part Red Cross plays in the U. S. army in peace and wartime was stressed yesterday by Major General Charles H. Gerhardt, commander of the 91st division at Camp White, at the annual luncheon meeting of Jackson county Red Cross chapter at Medford hotel.

The speaker said that the Red Cross will give more assistance in the struggle during this war than during World War I and he praised the organization for its tremendous help to the army in the Philippine struggle.

Army Women To Aid
Major Gerhardt said the army women will cooperate with the local Red Cross chapter and asked that they be coordinated in the activities of the chapter to the limit of their capacity.

The major general revealed that all the field officers of the 91st division went over the obstacle course in the field yesterday, and he said he was surprised and pleased how well they reacted to the problem.

Also a guest speaker from Camp White was Colonel Charles Hutter, camp surgeon, who reviewed the background of Red Cross from its origin to the present time. He also discussed medical activities in the army. Major C. K. Warren, public relations officer from Camp White was also present. Colonel Owen Meredith was unable to be present due to pressing camp activities.

Bullis Lauds Aides
Seth Bullis, chairman of the Red Cross board presided during the business session and praised the work of the officers during the past year. He introduced committee heads and one-minute talks were given by chairmen of volunteer services committees, headed by Mrs. Harry Holmes.
