

Harris Ellsworth's Policies Keynoted At G.O.P. Meeting

Roseburg, Sept. 16.—(Spl.)—Candidacy of Harris Ellsworth, Roseburg editor, for congress on the republican ticket was spurred throughout the new 4th district this week after organization of a GOP congressional committee and a campaign keynote by Ellsworth which gave his views on local and war problems.

Claude M. Hurd, Medford, was named chairman of the 4th district congressional committee; Miss Jeanette Calkins, Eugene, vice chairman, and Leon M. McClintock, Roseburg, treasurer.

The Roseburg organization meeting, called by Republican State Chairman Niel Allen, Grants Pass, was addressed by party leaders and other candidates.

Resources Pointed Out

Pointing out the "community of interests," in agriculture, mining, lumbering and other industries, in the 4th district, Ellsworth said that "we have in these seven counties a great deal to give to our nation. . . . As your congressman I can do a great deal toward making possible the use of our vast natural resources for the benefit of our war production and later for peace-time uses."

Ellsworth pointed out that the district contains more than one-half of all the Douglas fir in the United States, and that he is thoroughly familiar with logging, lumbering and federal forest policies.

Coos county coal should be made available to the people, he said, and leadership is needed to obtain development of nickel, chrome, copper, gold, cinnabar and water power.

"Our district must develop and grow great as all other parts of our great country have developed—in the American way and under free competitive enterprise," said Ellsworth. "I shall always oppose, as I always have opposed, government dictatorship over our industries and our very lives. I think the people who are served have a right to decide in the matter of power, for example, who shall serve them."

War Support Pledged
Declaring that there is but one great compelling issue now before the American people, Ellsworth promised, if elected, "to cooperate with the president of the United States in the war effort . . . there should be no partisanship in the war effort."

He charged New Deal congressmen with being "more concerned with winning the forthcoming election than with winning the war. Everyone knows that vital legislation is shelved until after the election."

Ellsworth said he believed in a sound and intelligent national old-age benefit program; a fair deal for all labor; a policy of production as opposed to a policy of scarcity.

CAVALRY TROOP G WILL PLAY HOST TO GEN. COWGILL

Cavalry Troop G, Oregon State Guard, with headquarters here, will entertain Brigadier General Ralph Cowgill, commander of the Oregon State Guard, at a dinner at the Jackson Hotel tonight at 7:15 o'clock.

General Cowgill succeeds the late General George A. White, former commander of the Oregon State Guard, after whom Camp White has been named.

The State Guard was organized after the Oregon National Guard was called to active duty and now has infantry and cavalry troops in all counties throughout the state.

General Cowgill and his wife are traveling with Mrs. White, widow of the late General White, and attended the dedication ceremonies at Camp White Tuesday.

The general is expected to bring important information to the troopers at this time.

Great advancements have already been made in the manufacture of manganese. This metal, obtained from sea water and so much lighter and stronger than many materials now in use, may very well be used in tomorrow's lighter, faster, more economical motor cars.
