

LET'S PRETEND
by WATKINS E. WRIGHT

Loris Raymond is seeking a musical career in New York, but finds the going difficult, as does Carey Carson, young would-be architect. They become friends, and hear of Roland Potter, a wealthy old bachelor, who wants to help a worthy young couple by paying them to act as caretakers on his Long Island estate. Loris and Carey marry temporarily, on a strictly business basis, to get the job. They are hired and Potter leaves on a cruise, after introducing Iris Wrenshaw, beautiful and wealthy, who takes a fancy to Carey. Drawn by her charm and interest in his career, Carey shows signs of regretting his marriage of convenience. Reluctantly he goes through with the plan to sing with Loris at the piano in a wayside night club, where they win enthusiastic applause and the amateur prize. Carey completes the celebration by kissing Loris for the first time.

CHAPTER XX
As the days grew longer and hotter, Carey began looking upon the times he had spent with Iris Wrenshaw as highlights in an otherwise dull existence. Loris felt the same way about life, only the exciting evening at the roadhouse was her solitary highlight.

Carey went on with his drawing and his planning in the big studio room, and Loris kept up her practicing. They slept, cared for Pottersplace, fed the birds and fish regularly, and wondered what was going to be the outcome of it all.

A week passed—two weeks. No word from the roadhouse manager. Nor did Carey have any word from Iris. It worried him. Was she discarding him, as she had those other men about whom the women at the Park Avenue club had spoken?

One day as he and Loris were spraying Roland Potter's roses, Carey was thinking along those lines. He was utterly discouraged. Imagine coming to New York to be a successful architect, and ending up doing things to a lot of bugs on Long Island!

Loris had been eyeing him, not blind to the fact that he looked low. "If the bugs could only take a good look at your face," she said, "spraying wouldn't be necessary."

"What's wrong with my face?" Carey asked.

"It's killing," said Loris. "That's all. It's enough to make even a poor little bug decide that life isn't worth living."

"Sorry."

They both worked in silence for a time. When the job of spraying was over, they sat down upon a bench near a vine-covered wall and lit cigarettes.

"By the way," said Loris, trying to sound very casual, "what ever became of Miss Wrenshaw?"

"That's what I've been wondering," said Carey, equally casual. "She's evidently done a disappearing act."

"Does her interest in you really mean so much, Carey?"

"Yes. Contacts like that mean a lot to any architect or would-be architect."

"Then why don't you get in touch with her and not wait for her to make the next move?"

"Are you sure you won't mind?"

"Certainly I don't mind!" Loris tried to blow a smoke ring, and succeeded only in looking kissable. "Since that roadhouse manager has dropped us like red-hot iron, you might as well look up your future. I'll see that Pottersplace isn't neglected."

"YOU'RE swell, Loris!" Carey said. "How about a picnic for three on the beach—moonlight—and a weenie roast?"

Old Indian Still Believes He Owns Chicago Lake Front

Shelbyville, Mich. (U.P.)—Moses Shagonaby, 86 years old, is still waiting for the day when he can lay claim to a piece of land which he says is his family birthright—Chicago's priceless lake front.

Shagonaby is the last living grandson of Mikh-du-juh, early 19th century chief of the Ottawa Indians who staked out the lake front for his own use around 1800 and had a deed to prove it.

The point is, where is the deed? Shagonaby reasons that the paper, held by Shagonaby's brother until his death 40 years ago, passed into the family diast tribe—the Pottawatamies—and that some of his relatives are keeping it from him.

What's more, Shagonaby figures they plan to keep holding out on him until he dies—which is where the old man intends to fool them. At 86, he still is in excellent health, is remarkably strong and has only a few gray hairs among his coal black locks. And his father lived to be 112!

Regardless of the slim chances of his ever convincing Chicago real estate dealers of his right to the lake front property, Shagonaby likes to think of what has been and what might be.

Mikh-du-juh, he recalls, settled lands in what is now northern Illinois at the beginning of the 18th century. Around 1817, the tribe moved southward and eastward, but not before the Ottawa chief had staked out his water-front property and drawn up a contract with white settlers in the territory.

Later, Mikh-du-juh signed another treaty with Gov. Lewis Cass of the territory of Michigan for lands which the tribe holds to this day. However, Chippewa and Pottawatamie chiefs were in on that deal, and that's where the tribal mix-up came in.

Mikh-du-juh married a Pottawatamie woman.

Shagonaby, now a retired farmer, concedes that if he ever did get hold of the title to the Chicago waterfront land, he probably would need a mint to finance a fight against the dozens of real estate lawyers who would take the warpath against him.
