

ACE SHOTS DOWN SIXTH ZERO WITH ONE GUN FIRING

Lt. Alvin Jensen, USMC,
First Accredited Ace in Group—Logs 200 Hours.

Headquarters, U. S. South Pacific Forces—(Delayed)—(U.P.)—Second Lt. Alvin J. Jensen, USMC, recently commissioned after winning his wings as an enlisted man and the first accredited ace in his fighter squadron, shot down his sixth Jap plane on August 26, although all but one of his guns had failed, reports from Munda airbase revealed today.

In addition, Jensen, who has logged more than 200 hours of combat flying in the south Pacific, destroyed at least four Jap planes in a lone strafing sweep over the strong Kahili airfield at Bougainville after becoming separated from the rest of his squadron.

Jensen, formerly a flying staff sergeant, lives at 1236-11th St.

N. W.) Washington, D. C.
Marine combat correspondent Staff Sgt. Pen T. Johnson (187 Santa Clara avenue) (Oakland, Cal.), reported that outstanding of the approximately 25 combat escort missions and raids in which Jensen has participated was a recent strafing mission over Kahili.

Jensen started with 16 fighters late one afternoon, but became separated from the formation in a thunderhead. He fought his way through the storm clouds and emerged an hour later alone and only a few miles from Kahili.

"I brought my Corsair down to tree-top level, skimming over a steep hill flanking the airfield runway," Jensen was quoted as saying. "At the near end of the runway were 12 large Jap bombers. I opened up with all my guns. Two of the bombers immediately burst into flames. One blew up, starting a huge fire."

"At the very far end of the runway I saw at least 10 Jap Zeros parked wingtip to wingtip. As I flew in with blazing guns I could see the heads of several pilots sticking out of the cockpits. I saw my tracers strike home. In a few seconds, two of the Zeros were burning fiercely."

"I made one more run, sweeping the entire field with my guns. I don't think I missed a plane."

Jensen knocked down his first two Japs, both Zeros, on April 7 during his first trip to the south Pacific combat zone. He became his squadron's first ace on August 5, during his second trip to the combat zone, when he shot down three more Japs when his formation of 16 fighters was jumped by 30 Zeros.

On August 26, while on a bomb escort mission, Jensen's division of four fighters again was attacked by 30 Zeros. All but one of Jensen's guns had gone out of commission, but he managed to shoot down one of the Japs.

When his last gun quit, Jensen reversed positions with his wingman, 1st Lt. Hartwell V. Scarborough, USMC, Aulander, N. C., who got three Zeros to become the squadron's second ace. Scarborough knocked down his first two Japs on April 7.

Jensen enlisted in the marines in May, 1940, and won his wings as an aviator in August, 1942. In May, 1943, he was a staff sergeant when he won his commission as a second lieutenant.

OWNERS COMPLAIN

Los Angeles—(U.P.)—The city council is up against one of its toughest and most humanitarian problems, namely whether to continue the enforcement of the ordinance requiring pet-food dealers to mix a certain amount of charcoal in horse meat to render it unfit for human consumption.

The council is receiving scores of complaints from cat owners. Some complain that the charcoal-treated meat makes it unpalatable for the pets, while another woman insists that ever since her whole collection of pet cats began eating the stuff they have all been seized with intestinal sluggishness.
