News Behind The News By Paul Mallon

Inside congress trying to get some arrangement for continuation of the Commodity Credit corporation food subsidies, which will make the consumer and wage earner think prices are not as high as they are by making the treasury stand some of the cost.

In short, the White House method is to compromise at whatever negotiable point it can find in order to stave off another general wage and price increase. Workers will be required to work it out, if it can be worked out, and the effectiveness of the results cannot even be guessed.

The crisis has war and political aspects as well as economic significance. Coal production already has broken down to the point where suffering in many localities can be expected this winter. Production of wheat was disturbed long before the recent crisis by the fact that sons and friends of miners were able to find other war work paying higher wages.

Then also the railroad brotherhoods are a powerful group, which usually gets what it wants. A rail strike obviously cannot be allowed in view of war necessity, even if it is voted. The rest of union leadership obviously is holding back to see how these two vanguards come out before bringing forward again their pressure for a general wage increase.

ALL this agitation is, of course, being used by Byrnes to frighten congress into a compromise on a food subsidy, but apparently without much effect. Even if Mr. Roosevelt's compromise plan is successful, it probably will lead the nation into higher inflationary ground, but apparently he hopes the ground will be beclouded so as not to scare anyone. Also, such negotiated decisions must be temporary.

Both labor leaders and farm leaders apparently justify their existence by planned successive campaigns to increase wages and improve conditions without end. Their organizational set-ups are such that they cannot afford to take a national economic viewpoint—or others which conflict with theirs. Nor have they overlooked the fact that a critical presidential election is in the offing next year, having recently modified their national political pledges at their conventions to the point of practically inviting the president to fish for their votes if he wants them—and to use bigger and better bait. An overall, arbitrary freezing of both prices and wages at the outset of this war (as Baruch demanded) might have obviated the existing difficulties. But with a policy of negotiation and adjustment having proceeded as far as it has, no one seems to be able even to suggest a wholly satisfactory or guaranteed solution.
