News Behind The News
By Paul Mallon

strength of leadership he is able to exert, will rest the sole power of his candidacy.

His scattered talks around the country during the spring and summer did not attract the following that was anticipated for a Republican governor, three times elected in strong campaigns in a large state like Ohio, considered the mother of presidents.

Bricker's friends say he wisely held himself back in those talks because he thought the Willkie people and the new dealers were the only ones trying to draw him out, and that he did not intend to let them get his campaign started too soon.

Thus, at this stage, the race is likely to become an active contest between Willkie and Bricker with possibilities of a deadlock in the convention which would draft Dewey.

WILLKIE'S prospective following so far seems lodged mainly in New England, Indiana, Oregon and some other electorally weak states.

Much of the Republican organizational activity (no one ever reads much of it) has been directed toward gathering the big electoral states in for favorable son candidates.

Governor Warren will have California, for instance; Martin, Pennsylvania; Green, Illinois; Bricker, Ohio; Stassen, Minnesota; Dewey, New York (and perhaps Michigan where the New Yorker is also a favorite son candidate, although Senator Vandenberg and General MacArthur are popular there).

All you hear in public discussion concerns polls by various organizations stating umpteen and two-tenths per cent of the voters will favor so and so, and twice umpteen and one-tenth per cent of the voters favors so and so. The polls, of course, only vaguely reflect popularity and have no political significance in this initial phase of the contest.

THE lines of the candidacies have not yet been sufficiently established to warrant any political poll. A beauty contest significance is the only one that can properly be attached, for instance, to the current Fortune survey reporting:

Roosevelt, 22.1 per cent; Dewey, 16.3; Willkie, 15.7; MacArthur, 13.3; Bricker, 4.3.

A booklet containing the opinions of famous doctors on this interesting subject will be sent FREE, while they last, to any reader writing to the Educational Division, $35 Fifth Ave., New York, N. Y., Dept. 6-1115

The only poll that will be worth noticing is the official one that starts in the primaries in March, but only 18 states will indulge this official poll.

The plans of the state Republican leaders count far more now, and these clearly suggest that the candidate who will win the next Republican nomination must get the favorite so states, which are now not scheduled to go to the convention pledged for any major candidates.
