

Sen Hates Men

by MARGOT NEVILLE

CHAPTER XXXV
ON LEAVING Dr. Nugent's dock, Grogan proceeded to Rockwater and entered the drawing room, where the others were still gathered.

He spoke to Brenda. "Miss Wheatley, I understand you have a key to Dr. Nugent's motorboat. Could you give it to me, please?"

"What?" Brenda's round eyes stared at him. "I-I haven't any key."

"How's that? Dr. Nugent has just told me that he has one key and you have the other."

"Oh!" Brenda hesitated a second. "I did have one—yes. But I lost it."

"Where and when did you lose it?"

"I don't know. I just discovered this morning that it was missing."

"Where did you keep it?"

"Sometimes in one purse, sometimes in another. I think it must have been in a little bag that I dropped overboard one night last week—a little bag in which I kept my lipstick and mirror and things like that."

"I see," Grogan turned to Felix. "I'd like a word with you, Mr. Burke. Will you come with me, please?"

Felix, without a glance at the others, rose and followed him out.

BY dinner time, Felix had not returned. Eileen was worried, wondering where he had gone with Grogan and what they were doing. Meanwhile, Bill and Brenda and Hurst had departed.

After dinner, Eileen and Joyce and Denise hung around for a while in the drawing room, but they had little to say to each other. Then, Joyce and Denise went upstairs, leaving Eileen alone.

Time passed and Felix still did not return, she grew more and more apprehensive.

Finally, she went up to her room. There seemed nothing to do but go to bed, though she did not expect to sleep. However, soon after the lay down, she did fall asleep, for the tension of the day had left her exhausted.

How long she had slept, she did not know, but suddenly she found herself sitting up in bed, very wide awake. There were subdued sounds out in the hall. Then she heard someone going down the stairs.

She saw by the luminous dial of her bedside clock that the time was a quarter past two. Who was moving about the house at this hour?

She had to find out. Moved by a kind of terror, she slipped on her slippers and went down the stairs.

Then she left her room and crept down the stairs. The lower floor was in darkness, but the front door was standing open. The person she had heard must have gone outside.

She went out into the garden and stood there listening and looking about her. However, she could see little, for the moon was hidden by clouds.

Suddenly, close to her, a twig snapped. Her heart gave a great thump. As a man's figure materialized out of the darkness, she stood terrified, afraid to speak.

THEN, dimly, she saw that it was Felix. He was in his bathing suit.

"Felix!" she cried, reaching out and catching hold of his arm. "What are you doing?"

"Shh," he whispered. "Be quiet. Why are you out here at this hour?"
