

BACK HIM UP!

He's shooting flames at a Jap position on a jungle-infested, Jap-held island somewhere in the South Pacific. With Rome behind him, he's pushing the Germans still farther north in Italy. He was one of the first to cross the English Channel and storm ashore in France just a few days ago.

Back of him was all the equipment and supplies he needed. That was our contribution. We at home built the equipment with our muscle and paid for it with our money. The job of the man in uniform isn't by any means finished, and neither is our job here at home finished. We still have to keep our men amply supplied and right now we have to buy many extra War Bonds to help pay the bill. War isn't cheap . . . but neither is a soldier's life.
