Regent Reports On War Projects Of D.A.R. Units

Projects and accomplishments of the Daughters of the American Revolution were reviewed this week by Mrs. Bert B. Lowry, Medford, state regent of Oregon, who selected the peak period of the Fifth War Loan drive for the statement since the efforts of the Daughters have been largely directed to war loans, the blood donor service of the American Red Cross and similar work during the war.

Purchases of war bonds by the various units of the Daughters of the American Revolution have now passed the million dollar mark, the state regent reports. This figure does not represent the individual purchases of members, but purchases of chapters, state units and the national organization.

Also considered outstanding is the contribution of more than $300,000 by the Daughters to the blood donor service of the American Red Cross. Mrs. Lowry reports. Part of this fund was spent to purchase equipment for the Red Cross blood plasma center in Portland, and for centers in other parts of the nation. In all, the Daughters have purchased 38 mobile units, equipment for 18 blood donor centers, 19 station wagons for use by the Red Cross, five sedans, one ambulance truck, three other trucks, two mobile canteens, one sterilizer and one heater.

In addition the Daughters themselves have volunteered by the hundreds as blood donors, the regent states, and are "repeaters," donating blood on a regular schedule.

Projects of the junior members of the D.A.R. are the purchase of "seeing eye" dogs for the blind and the purchase of Berman "metal locators". These locators, the regent explained, are appliances used by doctors to locate pieces of shrapnel and other metal in battle victims. The locators were first tried after the disaster of Pearl Harbor and are now widely used by service doctors in battle areas, reports to the organization indicate.

Music Association Meeting Delayed; Smith Here Later

The June meeting of the Jackson County Civic Music association board has been delayed because of the inability of Franklin Smith, Civic concert representative from New York, to be in Medford at the time planned. According to Seth Bullis, president of the association, Smith is now in the state of Washington and before coming to Medford for a meeting with the board must spend some time in Eugene working out the preliminary details of a joint town and university association.

Many interesting artists and attractions will be available for Medford next year according to the correspondence with Smith. At the time of his meeting with the board, the date will be determined for the annual membership week in the fall.

From its successful first year, plus the general satisfaction with the five concerts presented last year, it is apparent that the Jackson County Civic Music association has more than adequately filled a community need, Mr. Bullis states. The association will enter its second year with a small cash surplus, which Mr. Bullis says speaks well for the plan that makes concerts possible on a self-supporting, financially sound basis.
