Your Health and Its Care

BY DR. WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.
Readers should address inquiries to: Dr. William Brady
265 El Camino, Beverly Hills, Calif.

Dr. Brady

"Cancer is the most dreaded word in the language. Arthritis, a ruthless word, cripples as many aged as disease itself." An editorial quotes these statements from a book on geriatrics (old age and its diseases) and says amen to them.

Several months ago I paid my respects to that book on geriatrics and to two or three other recent books on the same subject, in this column. I had examined them in the hope of finding something fresh, something new, since they were the first textbooks of geriatrics, which has not yet, though it may become a field of practice for specialists, provided we can persuade the pediatricists to release a few patients from their supervision when patients get along past thirty or forty years of age.

The fight against cancer cannot bring any great victory as long as there are many people with the attitude of the writer of that editorial. What less dreaded term can or should an honest doctor use when confronted with signs or symptoms which may possibly spell cancer? The head-in-the-sand position the editorial writer approves may be all right from his point of view. It would be criminal for a doctor, it is the sacred duty of the doctor in such circumstances to tell the patient or the patient's family at the earliest possible moment that (1) he fears the trouble is cancer but he cannot be sure as yet, or (2) that the patient should have the benefit of the opinion of another doctor, or (3) it is cancer in his opinion and the patient should have the proper treatment immediately.

THE DOCTOR'S DUTY

whether it be X-ray, radium or radical surgery or a combination of these methods. There is no fair alternative course a doctor can follow.

The remarks about the terms "arthritis" and "arterio-sclerosis" in the queer editorial essay suggest that perhaps the writer of the essay may be a Wiseacre who has not only caught up with the medical practitioners and their "pills and potions" but has advanced a Yankee cult that simply exercises disease, pain, injury and other mortal obsessions from human consciousness.

In the allergy pamphlet you say to take 10 grains three times a day in water. Do you mean 10 grains at each dose, 30 grains a day or 10 grains a day in three doses? (J. F.)

Answer—Dissolve ten grains in water, and take it all. Repeat this the second time. Then once again. Three times ten grains makes thirty grains a day.
