Gordon K. Hirabayashi, American-born Japanese, and his bride, the former Esther Schmoor of Seattle, pictured after Quaker wedding ceremony in Spokane, Wash. Hirabayashi is at liberty on $1000 bond following charges of failure to comply with Selective Service regulations.

shut, tiny white teeth outlining the round pink opening, he nearly split his face.

Almost every one in the car must have been watching him for over the weary faces of the passengers swept a look of tender amusement. Then some one chuckled; others did the same and soon there was a burst of rollicking laughter all up and down the aisle. No off-color wisecrack, no practised burlesque but just a child's unconscious yawn had made the people forget they were hungry and tired, and had set them laughing. A result many a vaudeville performer works hard to achieve without success.

SUCCESS STORY

Concord, N. H.—(U.P.)—Begun as a small country printing office, the Rumford Press here now prints more than 50 American magazines. The plant has grown since 1909 into an annual business of $1,000,000, with 600 employees and its own branch postoffice.

FAMILY COMPETITION

Camp Roberts, Cal.—(U.P.)—Sgt. Andrew E. Nelson breathed a sigh of relief when his mother was temporarily rejected for overseas duty because of a swollen ankle. The sergeant feared that his mother, who enlisted in the WACs four months ago, would beat him overseas.

Observations

"Just folks": At a certain street corner sits an old man, surrounded by stacks of newspapers. To call him a "newsboy" seems impertinence to me yet passers-by refer to him as such. His teeth are uncared for; he needs a bath, to tell you the truth, he needs three baths. Yet his language has an almost classic purity; he quotes Pliny and Homer and makes them come to life so that their beliefs and philosophies are no longer ancient but modern. He belongs on a college faculty, rather than on a street corner; provided, of course, that he first took a bath. She's a tall, dark, good looking girl in a sweet serious sort of way. All day she sits in front of a typewriter translating into readable language mysterious pot books and dashes from her note book. Just another stenographer to me until I found her intent over a book during the noon hour in an inner office, eating her lunch from a paper bag. She told me she has stage ambitions. "Though there isn't much chance to break into the theatre here on the Pacific coast. But some day I'll get to New York and then—". Her eyes were twin stars at the thought of what New York holds in store for her. Her passionate belief in this gave me an ache inside, though I didn't know just why. The garbage man, coming at 6 a. m., found me at work before a bridge table set on the lawn where the clack of my typewriter
