

Your Health and Its Care

BY DR. WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.

WHERE DIGESTION BEGINS

In a healthy person the saliva contains a digestive enzyme or "ferment" called ptyalin, which converts cooked starch into maltose (a type of sugar) which in turn is converted into dextrose after the food reaches the intestine, and that is the form in which all carbohydrate food (starches or sugars) is absorbed and utilized for heat and muscular energy.

How important this part of digestion is for good health and physical efficiency is hard to realize.

The chewing process in the mouth thoroughly mixes food and saliva—or should do so—but the bolus is swallowed too quickly for the ptyalin to complete its action on carbohydrate food. In the stomach the gastric juice is sufficiently acid to destroy the ptyalin or to arrest its action (ptyalin requires neutral or alkaline medium, as in the saliva). It was therefore supposed formerly that salivary digestion ceased when the food entered the stomach and hence is of little value in the digestive process.

We know better now. We know that a considerable part of an ordinary meal may remain in the cardiac or upper portion of the stomach for the first hour or more after the meal, completely shut off from the acid secretion in the lower or pyloric end of the stomach, so that salivary digestion continues for nearly an hour in the stomach.

There are other good reasons why it is essential to chew such foods as vegetables, greens, cereals and breads made from them, fruits and nuts well before gulping them down or washing them down with beverage, but we haven't room to enumerate them here.

It would not be so serious if the loss of a single tooth or maybe a couple of teeth entailed merely a 3% or 6% deficiency in mastication. If the missing tooth or teeth are not promptly replaced with functionally efficient dentures the entire alignment, bite or occlusion of the teeth is bound to suffer change in the course of weeks or months, and the masticating function becomes thereby far more than 3% or 6% deficiency.

It might not be so serious, for a year or so perhaps, if the deficient mastication and deficient salivary digestion entailed only the annoyance or discomfort of "dyspepsia," "acid indigestion," "gas," "nervous indigestion," and the like. But that's only the lighter side of it.

It is from the foods above mentioned that we get most of the vitamins and minerals required for good nutrition—if we get them at all. If mastication of such foods is deficient we just don't get the vitamins and minerals from the foods we eat.

And so, loss of teeth spells nutritional deficiency, and nutritional deficiency, in the great majority of cases, goes unrecognized or masquerades under some meaningless or misleading name which suffices to satisfy the curiosity of the victim regarding the nature of his trouble.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS
Washing Hair
Is it harmful to wash the hair twice a week because of excessive oiliness? Also is it dangerous to take a bath or wash the hair during menstrual period?

Answer—No. No. Better send stamped envelope bearing your address, ask for pamphlet "Care of the Hair and Scalp" from Dr. Brady, 265 El Camino, Beverly Hills, Calif. This pamphlet contains ten cents for it. A clipping of this item is not a substitute.

Well, Whadaya Know?
Please send me a pamphlet on spasmodic "croup" (laryngitis), age 6, 47 pounds, healthy, wakes at night occasionally and complains "Mother, I can't breathe." She will just swallow her breath. Had her examined several times, but nothing done to account for it. (Mrs. G. H.)

Answer—Shucks, for a moment it seemed that at last we had unearthed another case of croup. I expressed a year ago the observation that spasmodic or catarrhal croup had been a very frequent occurrence in recent years. Three or four readers in reply assured me their children still have it. Still, I am sure it is rare compared with its frequency when I was a young country doctor and available for emergency call in the night. Your daughter, Mrs. G. H., evidently hasn't croup. However, it can do no harm to supplement her diet with calcium and vitamin D for a few months, as instructed in the pamphlet on Croup. I am glad to send on request if you include stamped envelope bearing your address.
