LABOR INTEREST IN POLITICS IS URGED BY MORSE

Wayne L. Morse, Republican candidate for U. S. senate, arrived in Medford Wednesday night and spoke before members of the Medford Central Labor Council. He opened his southern Oregon campaign with an appearance in Grants Pass yesterday and spent this morning in Ashland, planning to make contacts in Medford this afternoon.

Morse urged labor to take an interest in politics, not in a party fight but to back candidates of worth and principle. He stated that he carried the Republican banner and intended to remain such despite many criticisms that he is not conservative enough for older Republicans. He explained that he considered the Republican party policies to contain the right degree of liberality.

At GOP Quarters His schedule today included a breakfast this morning with lumbermen followed by a meeting in Ashland with precinct workers of that vicinity and a meeting with Ashland Rotary club at noon.

Upon his return to Medford he planned many contacts followed by a brief appearance at 8 o'clock at the Republican headquarters, West Main and Grape streets.

Medford Central Labor Council members today stated that Morse had been endorsed by the local council and also the Oregon State Federation of Labor. A round table discussion followed his talk last night.

Republican leaders in Medford stated today that the headquarters is open for those who care to attend the Morse meeting tonight.

Gestapo Horror Spot Saved To Remind World of Torture Visited Upon Belgian People

By Frank Fisher
United Press Correspondent

Breendonck Belgium—(U.P.)—The Germans killed more than 120 persons a month here, the guide said as he led the way to a courtyard where, when tortures had failed, the victims were shot or hanged.

There was the gallows where men dropped through trapdoors so shallow that their necks didn't break, and they just dangled there, strangling slowly. Around its base was a mass of flowers, piled there by relatives of the dead.

Preserved For Tourists The Belgians are going to preserve Breendonck. When peace comes again, tourists will be able to drive out from Brussels to this low-lying fort near Antwerp and see just how the Gestapo tortured its victims.

The branding irons will be there, and the pulley by which men were lifted from the ground by their ankles and dropped down in sharp jerks for hours, and the whipping room and the steel rods with which the whipping was done, and other torture chambers.

Breendonck is not a pretty sight, but the Belgians intend to keep it as a reminder after the war when memories grow dim that these things did happen; that this was the enemy.

Nothing Subtle There was nothing subtle about the methods of the Gestapo torturers, nothing fancy. When they burned a body with hot irons, they heated the irons in a little stove within a few feet of where the victim lay strapped on a table, just as they did in the middle ages.

Most of them withstood that. Then came the next room, where the naked victims were hoisted by the heels to the ceiling, then dropped two feet at a time. This lasted two or three hours, up and down, until the head swelled like a balloon and blood ran out of the ears, mouth and nose.

One cell contained nothing but an air pump with a vent outside. In the wall was a hole through which the Germans forced gas. If the victim was strong enough, he could pump in fresh air and keep himself alive for a while. The weak died quickly.

Hot, Cold Treatment The hot and cold treatment was there. Naked victims were confined to a small room, into which was forced a draft of hot air, then cold.

The Germans played variations on this theme. One major in charge would order the patriots to strip, then march to shower baths capable of handling a dozen men at a time. The others waited outside, often in knee-deep snow, without a stitch of clothing, and after the shower went back across the courtyard, still naked, to the cells.

Only the dead found peace at Breendonck. The Gestapo had a simple method of making sure that the victims didn't rest. The walls of the cells, a bare six feet square, were whitewashed. If one mark of white showed on the clothing, a prisoner was beaten. So the men and women stood upright for 12 hours at a time.

The Belgians are not a tolerant people; at least, not yet. The same cells now are occupied by Quislings. The only thing omitted from the program is the torture. But the Quislings don't know that. They are as careful about the whitewash as any Belgian was.

From markings on the wall where the patriots indicated the passage of the days, it seemed that one had lived as long as 20 days. One had scribbled: "Marcel Bouchard—Mort Pour La Patrie."

Wizard Dunninger Lawful Husband Is Court's Decision

New York, Oct. 5.—(U.P.)—Mrs. Chrystal Spencer Dunninger was established by supreme court ruling today as the common law wife of mental wizard Joseph Dunninger, and was awarded a separation.

Justice Denis O'Leary Cahalan decided that the couple had entered into a common-law marriage relationship on April 28, 1928, the day Mrs. Dunninger testified the mind-reader swore on a Bible he was her husband, and the day Dunninger maintained he was at home with his mother, the lady whose company he preferred.

F.D.R. Will Urge Party Workers To Get Out The Vote

Washington, Oct. 5.—(U.P.)—President Roosevelt steps out of his commander-in-chief role tonight in his second—and possibly his last—campaign speech of the 1944 campaign to urge Democratic party workers to "get out the vote" on Nov. 7.

The president's speech will occupy the top spot in a 30-minute program arranged by Democratic National Chairman Robert E. Hannegan and going on the air on the CBS and Mutual networks at 7 p. m. EWT.

Reds Outsmart Nazi Generals

London, Oct. 5.—(U.P.)—The Berlin radio said today that Soviet agents contrived to get into the uniform of German generals last summer, "issue fake orders, and repeatedly led our troops into unfavorable positions."

Lt. Gen. Kurt Dittmar, Nazi radio commentator, attributed the German reverses on the eastern front during the summer in part to the Russian infiltration of the German officers' ranks.

PICTURE AIDS COPS

Evansville, Ind., Oct. 5.—(U.P.)—Police today found a good use for a political campaign picture. A. V. Burch, Republican candidate for auditor of the state, had a picture made of a political gathering he addressed at Mitchell. It showed a pickpocket with his hand in another man's pocket. Police had an enlargement made and are searching for the culprit.

MEDFORD WOMAN KILLS BUCK NEAR TOLO TOWNSITE

Mrs. J. L. Williams, 1304 Reddy avenue, accompanied her husband on a hunting trip this morning and surprised both herself and him by killing a deer.

The Williams have been going out early every morning this week on quick trips to nearby spots where deer might be found, and while Mr. Williams had taken a few shots, his luck had been poor. This morning Mrs. Williams spotted a fine two-point buck and taking careful aim with her rifle, shot the animal squarely through the head.

"I wasn't a bit nervous at the time," Mrs. Williams reported to a friend, "but afterwards I shook like I had the ague!" Needless to say, this was Mrs. Williams' first deer.

The animal was shot in the Tolo district, Mrs. Williams having spotted the deer while hiking on a side hill about a mile north of the former town-site. She quoted hunters as saying that the deer are being found unusually close in for this early in the fall.

BUSINESS WOMEN ON FOREST SURVEY TRIP

Three members of the Medford Business and Professional Women's club accompanied Karl Janouch, supervisor of the Rogue River National Forest Service, on an inspection trip Monday. Mr. Janouch recently addressed the club on forest topics and at that time invited a committee to take a forest trip.

Mrs. Gladys York, Mrs. Mildred Drury and Miss Maurine Shearer made the trip with the supervisor and gained information on timber sale procedure, grazing conditions, recreation matters and on fire control. The party visited the Mt. Stella lookout station and lunched with one of the blister rust control crews.

DETROIT STRIKERS RETURN TO WORK

Detroit, Oct. 5.—(U.P.)—The first of approximately 6,000 maintenance workers whose strikes halted or slowed production in 33 Detroit war plants returned to their jobs this afternoon.

The Chrysler Corporation reported that a "sufficient number" of maintenance employees showed up on the 3:30 p. m. shift to enable resumption of production at its Jefferson avenue plant employing 3,280 persons.

A Chrysler spokesman also reported, however, that the Dodge main plant would remain closed until midnight "because the local there voted not to go back to work until then."

The back-to-work movement followed a meeting of strikers representatives this morning at which they voted to end the walkouts immediately.

Thomas Jefferson was Governor of Virginia, a leader in the Revolutionary War, Minister to France, Washington's Secretary of State, Vice President, and twice President of the United States.
