(Acme Radio-Telephoto)
Waving white flag of surrender, German soldier walks out from Nazi-held fort on coast of France, which was under fire from guns of U. S. S. Quincy. Photo was taken from U. S. plane which radioed back to warship to cease firing. Plane had been flying over fort to direct fire from ship.

Your Health and Its Care

MENTAL DERANGEMENT

Whether the soldiers who develop one or another form of mental derangement while in training or in service are simply the defective who would have done so had they never been inducted at all, is a matter of opinion. However, I suspect I'd develop a bad case of the jitters from the din of battle alone to say nothing of the extreme imminence of danger. Fear is the principal cause of shock.

In World War, Part I, "shell shock" was the favorite term for it. In World War, Part II, that name has gone out of fashion and various other names have been introduced. I don't know just why. By whatever name they call it, then breakdown would have happened sooner or later, war or no war. Had there been no war the breakdown would have been ascribed to "over-work," worry, business cares, financial responsibilities and the stress and strain of modern life, whatever that may mean. Anything but the sins of the victim or the sins of his parents.

Here is my suggestion to the individual who believes his trouble is nervous exhaustion, brain fog, nervous fatigue, neurasthenia, nervous breakdown or weak nerves. You may need a complete rest but for goodness sake don't try to get it by sitting around or by lying around. The rest you need is change—change of task change of occupation, change of routine living habit, change of scene, but particularly change of living habit—if you are now living by your wits, or as a parasite upon or by the bounty of friend or relative, snap out of it, get yourself a job of honest work, work you do with your muscles—that's the rest you need.

And here is a suggestion to the individual who is in training for a neurotic career. If you are a soft white collar worker, a professional person, a business man or woman, a housekeeper who doesn't keep house but hires it kept for her, a student or an artist it is not healthful recreation for you to attend the ball game, the theater or the football game as a spectator, not even if you get excited and scream at umpire or players or other hysterical spectators like yourself. But it is fine recreation for you to spend your afternoon of playing a little game of ball in sandlot or pasture or hiking to the next village or DOING SOMETHING with your hands, any kind of work that requires use of your muscles. Work, play, hobby, pastime, recreation, diversion, game, sport, whatever you choose for recreation, if yours is a sedentary occupation, let it be SOMETHING YOU DO YOURSELF, preferably something you can do as well or perhaps better than your companions, opponents or competitors. If you will make a brief survey of all the "nervous" folk you know, or those who purport to have "nervous fatigue," "nervous exhaustion" or "nervous breakdown," you will find that they are almost always people who had nothing to DO by way of avocation, people with one-track minds, people with little interest, knowledge, ability, skill or enthusiasm for anything outside of their fixed means of livelihood.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Time to Duck the Cri
The melancholy days are come and we hope you will give us another educational course on the Common Respiratory Infections and how to avoid them. At our house we attribute the extraordinary freedom from such illnesses we have enjoyed for several seasons now to the teachings of our good friend, "Dr. Doc Brady."

Answer:—Thank you, I'll try to get in an occasional talk on that subject—but whenever I refer to prevention of the common respiratory infections, a lot of important people get pretty sore because I ridicule such harmless incidents as drafts, wet feet, insufficient clothing, chilling change of weather.

How to Make Coffee and Win Friends
I am anxious to learn more about your method of making coffee. We have always assumed that coffee is bad for you. (M. D.)

Answer:—What a lot of joy you have missed. Send 25¢ for a self-addressed envelope for the red book "What to Eat and Why"—and study the chapter on How to Make Coffee and Win Friends.

attended by 175 people and featured a talk by Mrs. Luther Hank on past and present accomplishments of the Grange for the farmer.

The program opened with an address of welcome by Master G. E. Ousterhout. Accordion solos were given by Billy Littlefield and clarinet solos by Kenneth Thurston, accompanied by his mother, Mrs. Phil Thurston. Mr. Victor Hay gave a saw solo, Ruth and Naomi Hay presented a tableau and Mr. Hay presented nature moving pictures. The evening ended with a cake walk and dancing, with Mr. Littlefield being presented the cake.

Next meeting of H.E.C. will be held Wednesday, Oct. 25, at the home of Mabel Harnish, with Laura Clarke as co-hostess.

THE GRANGE

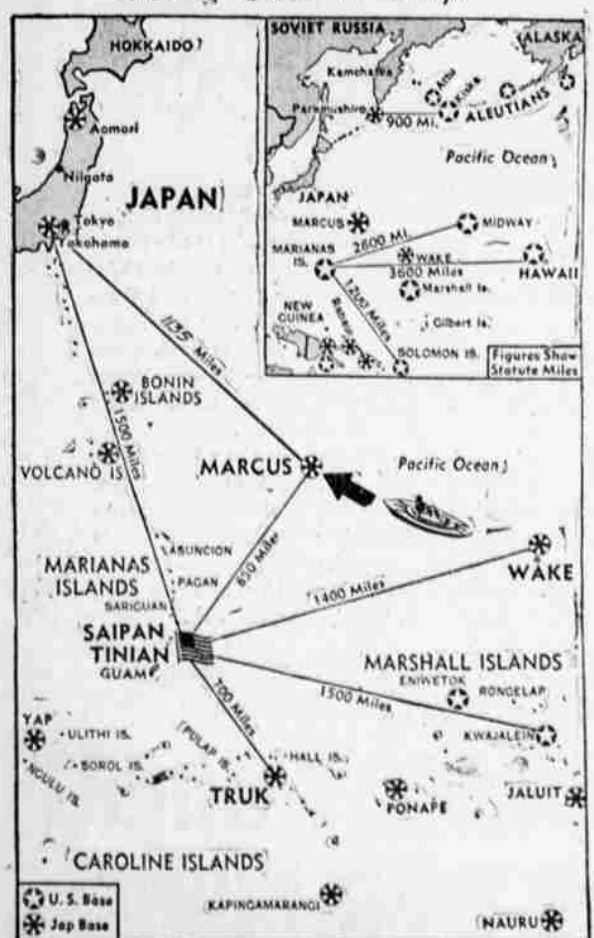

Eagle Point Grange members at another well attended meeting Oct. 3 witnessed the exemplification of 3rd and 4th degrees to the following: Christine Dawson, Kermit DeHaas, Melba DeHass, E. J. Linvik, Edith Linvik, Hazel McCune, John Noble, Raymond Winney, George Swinney, Minnie Swinney, James G. Town, Jimmie Town, Dorothy Trantham, L. H. Wertz, Mabel Wertz, and Jessie M. Tycer.

A number of fine committee reports included a comprehensive review by William Perry of the old age pension plan now on the ballot. A report on the dairy co-op movement was given by Roscoe Roberts. Mrs. Olive Floyd, now organizing the county Granges for the war chest campaign, appointed Lettie Van Scoy chairman of the committee selected from Eagle Point.

Hitting Close to Tokyo

(Acme Telephoto)
American warships, ranging boldly within 1188 miles of Tokyo, strike a crippling blow at Japan's Marcus Island base with an all-day bombardment that spread fire and ruin through the island stronghold. It was the first air-attack of the war on the pinpoint island bastion guarding the eastern approaches to the Japanese homeland.

CAPITAL SCRIBES PICK NEWSPAPERS AND COLUMNISTS

Washington, Oct. 12—(U.P.)—A group of Washington newspaper men have selected the New York Times as the newspaper maintaining the best all-around Washington news service as measured by reliability, comprehensiveness and fairness, it was announced today.

The selection was made in a poll conducted by the Saturday Review of Literature. Questionnaires were sent to 896 members of the congressional press gallery and 160 answers were received.

Arthur Krock, chief of the New York Times Washington bureau, was selected by 51 voters as "The Washington correspondent who exerts through his writings the greatest influence on Washington." Drew Pearson, author of the United Feature Syndicate's Washington Merry-Go-Round, was second with 32 votes and Walter Lippman, New York Herald Tribune columnist was third with 19 votes.
