

ROGUE DAM PLAN BUCKED BY STATE GAME COMMISSION

Project Would Be Detrimental to Fish Life Is Report to National Committee.

Portland, Oct. 13—The battle for Rogue river was launched by the state game commission Thursday after four years of silent but deadly preparation, the first shot being adoption of a preliminary report made by biologists of the commission and the United States fish and wild life service, who have conducted a painstaking survey of fish life in relation to a multiple dams project proposed by the federal reclamation bureau.

Dams at any one of a number of sites surveyed on the main Rogue would be detrimental, the report states. This report was ordered transmitted to the national water resources committee at Washington, D. C., and will eventually reach the reclamation bureau, army engineers and other agencies interested in the huge irrigation network planned by the reclamation bureau.

Dam Total Uncertain
The biologists reported that they have been unable to get information from the reclamation agency on the number and types of dams projected, but they assume that the largest of these river barriers may be built on the main Rogue at Debinger Gap.

They make the major premise that fishing interests do not want any dams at all on the main Rogue, though admitting that smaller dams presumably proposed on the Merlin project, either at Graves creek or Jump Off Joe creek; the Evans valley project at Evans creek; several streams in the Applegate river valley and several in the Illinois river valley might not greatly injure the runs of migratory fish.

"The Savage Rapids diversion has already reduced the water supply of the Rogue to a point where fish life is endangered," the report continues, "this hazard being created by rising water temperatures. If the dam builder can guarantee to release 150 second-feet of water below Savage Rapids, their contention that fishing conditions could be improved would be tenable.

Replacement Held Costly
"It will be costly for the government to produce fish to replace those which cannot go over a high dam to the spawning grounds. An actual count of chinook and silver salmon and steelhead trout showed that 71,600 went over the Gold Ray dam in a year. This total is nearly twice as large as that recorded at Grand Coulee and the Shasta dam. The government spent $3,000,000 for fish propagation at Coulee and $2,000,000 at Shasta.

"We have no details on the Rogue dam plans, but if a high barrier is erected on the main river we estimate the cost of replenishing fish losses will probably be $4,000,000 (based on experience at Grand Coulee.)"

Every federal, state and private agency interested in the Rogue river valley water resources will be given a chance to present views at a series of hearings which will be held at various points in the state up to December 15.

Grants Pass Dairy Co-operative Near Construction Step

Grants Pass, Oct. 13—Work of the local dairy cooperative organization committee, made up of local dairymen with Frank Walker as chairman and L. O. Baker as secretary, is now nearing the stage when the completed organization can be turned over to a regularly elected board of directors with authority to secure a site and proceed with construction.

At a recent meeting L. O. Baker, C. C. Castleberry, Victor Boehl, E. C. Reinhart and W. L. Dresback were elected a committee to file articles of incorporation with the state corporation commissioner for the Rogue Valley Dairy Cooperative association. The necessary articles have now been filed and returned to the committee to register in the Josephine county clerk's office.

The organization committee has investigated numerous possible building sites and the availability of equipment and building materials and the facts assembled indicate that now is the time for the farmers to establish their own dairy products plant.

L. K. Saun, who is a technical and legal adviser connected with one of the federal agencies will be in Grants Pass to meet with the dairy producers at Redwood Grange hall the evening of October 18 at eight o'clock for a general organization meeting.

HEALTH ASSN. IN GREATER EFFORT BECAUSE OF WAR

Knowing that war has always been accompanied by a spread of disease and a decline in health, officers of the Jackson County Public Health association inaugurated a more widespread educational program as soon as World War II became imminent. The association is a member agency of the Medford Community Chest, now conducting the annual campaign for funds.

This program has been steadily increased with very satisfactory results under the leadership of Mrs. Elwood Hedbery, president. Other officers of the association are Mrs. R. H. Wilcox, vice-president; Mrs. Charles Barnes, secretary; Mrs. Alex Sparrow, treasurer. Executive board members are Mrs. Glen Taylor, Mrs. Moore Hamilton, Mrs. R. E. Green, Mrs. Ruth Bauer, Mrs. Lewis Ulrich, Mrs. John S. Day, Mrs. Howard Hill, Mrs. Leonard Carpenter, Mrs. J. C. S. Weills and Miss Helen Bullis. The advisory committee is composed of Dr. C. H. Paske, Dr. A. E. Merkel and Mrs. Will Dodge.

The association is composed entirely of volunteer workers and has no paid executives. As a lay organization it works hand in hand with the Jackson County Health department, which was organized in 1925, following years of promotional work by the Jackson County Public Health association, organized in 1917.
