Welcome to Governor Bricker

As at the Chicago convention in June, it would appear the weather man is a New Dealer.
At least after one of the most beautiful Falls in many years, it started to rain the moment Governor Bricker of Ohio entered the state, and it looks like rain for the Bricker train stop in Medford this evening.

HOWEVER, the Republican nominee can rest assured that no New Deal weather man can really dampen the enthusiasm for the Republican ticket in Medford and Southern Oregon this year.

Regardless of how many are able to greet the train this evening, regardless of what the rest of the state, or the rest of the country, may do on November 7th, this section of Oregon is certainly going for "Dewey and Bricker" and against four more years of President Roosevelt and the New Deal.

And unless all signs fail it is going for them in a BIG way!

An "Honest Harding?"

One of our good Democratic friends—we still have ONE!—when apprised of our intention to greet the "Bricker Special" remarked he didn't think he would go to the station to welcome the G. O. P.'s "Honest Harding."

That term applied to the Governor of Ohio by the late William Allen White, is supposed to have ended the former's chances of becoming the Presidential nominee.

We don't know about that. But we do know this, an "Honest Harding" would have been a VERY different Harding—a Harding without the "Ohio Gang," without Harry Daugherty or Tea Pot Dome.

So the damning phrase was, rightly understood, perhaps not so devastating after all.

WE also know this: If William Allen White had attended the Chicago convention—and he would had he lived—we feel certain he would have regretted that remark.

For "Will" was a straight-shooter and a generous foe, if there ever was one.

And John W. Bricker rose in stature at that Republican convention last June, almost as sensationally as Henry Wallace did, at the Democratic convention a few weeks later.

YES, Governor Bricker came to the convention with an excellent record as a governor, an executive, an administrator with very strong backing for the presidential nomination.

He left with all those qualities intact, but without what he sought, yet he stood far higher in the regard and respect and affection of all those who attended that convention, than when he arrived.

For John W. Bricker did play the game in a fine, manly, unselfish fashion. He might have adopted a dog-in-the-manger attitude and made pretty much a mess of that convention—for the strength of his personal following was amazing.

But when he saw he could not get the nomination himself he not only made the seconding speech for Governor Dewey—but for the sake of party harmony and effectiveness and against his own personal inclinations, he accepted the secondary role of Vice-President, and at once went to work whole-heartedly for the man who had beaten him.

We have not agreed with all of Governor Bricker's views, and don't now, but we will say this—he is a good loser, a good sport, a loyal and devoted Republican.

Ahead of Schedule?

We are in receipt of the following communication signed "Greater Medford Club":

To the editor: Would you please explain to a group of interested readers how General Eisenhower can now say the war is ahead of schedule both in Europe and the South Pacific, when ten months ago he said the war in Europe would be over this year? How can we be ahead of schedule and still west of the Rhine if Germany is to be defeated in a little over two months time?

Well, in the first place General Eisenhower did not say the war was ahead of schedule in Europe. The remark was made a few days ago by General Marshal, chief-of-staff, and he said the war was ahead of schedule, not in Europe, but in France and the South Pacific.

No doubt it is, for France has been cleared of the enemy, and a far more bitter and effective resistance by the Germans in that country was no doubt expected.

AS to what the official war schedule was or is regarding Europe we can only guess at that. But not very long ago President Roosevelt said Germany was not expected to fold up until the allied armies reached her borders, then Germany would probably never submit to the devastation and ruin to the "Fatherland" a fighting advance to Berlin would bring.

Very likely this was the view of the Allied High Command at that time. And the schedule as far as the end of the war in Europe is concerned might well have been based on that.

Probably the people of Germany would quit now if they could, but Hitler and the Gestapo, with nothing to lose and everything to gain by continued resistance, however hopeless, won't let them!

News Behind The News By Paul Mallon

Washington, Oct. 13—Continuing a noncritical analysis of the Dumbarton Oaks program for postwar (see column published October 12), nothing in the text designates Washington as the headquarters for the new league of nations after this war, but the program will start what eventually will be a very large world administration which must be convenient to the centers of all phases of world activity.

Paul Mallon

There is to be a military staff committee, made up of the chiefs of staff of the United Nations, permanently advising the security council as to how to meet aggressors. In effect, this international military staff would conduct the future wars, or blockades or military actions against nonco-operative powers. It would be a permanent international war department.

Disarmament, diplomatic, economic and other committees unquestionably would be required to maintain sufficient permanent offices to advise the security council about what actions should be recommended to the nations.

In these vital matters the security council is to be virtually supreme. On peace or war, the new league is to be controlled by the major United Nations in consultation with a few representatives of the smaller powers on the council. But in other matters the second component part in the new peace setup is to have major authority.

A general assembly of all the nations (each with a single equal vote and therefore beyond direct control of the big united nations) will make recommendations concerning "economic, social and other humanitarian problems), although it also will have a hand in drawing recommendations for disarmament and regulation of armaments.

In economic and social matters, the assembly, however, will be required to work largely through a committee of 18 (each member one vote). This committee also is to be a permanent, continuous body, whereas the assembly will meet but once a year to receive reports from all the others, make appropriations and revise recommendations.

The EAS committee no doubt will become an enlarged replica of the league of nations commissions on labor, health, opium, child welfare, social conditions.

In everything, all these various committees at bottom can only recommend action to other committees, not take any itself, can recommend action to the various nations, but has no military or economic force of its own.

THE theory upon which the league of nations was built is to be tried again, but harder now, and under our leadership. Whether these will be more successful no one can say. The organizations proposed will have no more value than the use that is made of them.

These texts will be no more important than actions taken. They constitute only broad charters and contain nothing that is fundamentally new.

WHY the old league failed is historically moot. It collapsed in the face of the Japanese invasion of Manchuria and disintegrated when Mussolini invaded Ethiopia. My personal opinion is that it failed to stop these repudiations because no one wanted to go to war over these questions—Britain, France or any major power.

If it had been in the league I suspect our leadership would have been as evasive and appeasing as Britain's and the French, reflecting the will of their people and ours at that time. Whether a new formula will escape this gravest defect of the old, no one can say.

Collectors wanting first-day covers may send up to 10 self-addressed envelopes to the postmasters at Los Angeles 52, Calif., or New York, I. N. Y., Walter said.

MEDFORD SOLDIER FINDS FAMILIAR SIGN DOWN SOUTH

Staff Sgt. Robert M. Boyd, automobile salesman in Medford before the war, wants to know how much it costs the local Chamber of Commerce to advertise in the south, and accompanied his request with a picture taken between Mobile, Ala., and Biloxi, Miss. The picture is of a tract of land and a building, the latter with a large sign which reads "Jackson County Fairgrounds".

Sgt. Boyd sent the picture to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Boyd of 1404 East Main street and suggested that it might be of interest to the Jackson County Chamber of Commerce here and jokingly wrote, "ask them what it costs to advertise down here". Mrs. Boyd presented the picture to the Chamber staff this morning.

Sgt. Boyd and his wife took the picture while en route from New Orleans, where he had been stationed with the air corps, to Dalhart, Tex., where he is now on duty. The sergeant has been in the army since 1942 and worked for the Cooksey auto firm here before going into the service.

His brother, Jack Boyd, is now stationed at Miramar, Calif., at the marine corps base there and recently wrote that he had been assigned to the personnel to the permanent staff of the post exchanges at the base.

TOMATO HARVEST PRACTICALLY OVER

Ralph E. Koozer, manager of the Bagley Cannery at Ashland, reports harvesting of the tomato crop of the valley practically completed, with most of the cannery's output going into tomato juice. The crop was light and below average quality, Koozer further reports. Operations were hampered by lack of labor.

Picking of Boscs, P. Barry, and Winter Nellis pears is now underway, and peak of the pear harvest has been passed. Packing houses expect the cleaning up process to take another two or three weeks. They are still handicapped by lack of experienced packers.

Rains of the past ten days have been beneficial to fall pastures and cover crops but the precipitation so far, has not been sufficient to put the ground in shape for extensive fall plowing. Some stock has started home from summer ranges in the high hills, but it will take a heavy storm to start a general movement to the lower levels. A report to the Medford Irrigation district today from Fish Lake said a light rain fell last night.
