Olive Barber's Observations

If you're just a nice ordinary person, your name isn't apt to make the headlines. You have to be "very" something or other for that—very good or bad, very handsome or very homely.

Now since this is true in our human world, how much more is it so of the bird world. So the chances of an average little guy like the Junco ever making a splash are just about nil. His only claim to the "very" classification is that he is very common; also very much neglected by authors of bird books for after a cool nod acknowledging that he does exist, they pass on to the handsomes, the colorfuls, the sweet singers.

I'm aware of him this morning because the first real rain fell during the night. Locally, the first rain sends the Juncos pouring down out of the hills. Their white lateral tail feathers give them a sort of bouncing flight. If the day is gloomy, their neutrally colored bodies can scarcely be seen so that only the white vees of their outer tail feathers show. So it was this morning and I had the illusion of a horde of slender-winged butterflies in agitated escape from something. The Junco isn't agitated a bit; he just likes to go bumpety-bump through the air and so does.

I can truly say Juncos have given me more real entertainment at the feeding table than any other winter visitor. The toneless, piping chatter of the individual Junco isn't so much, but multiply this by 75 or 100, as happens shortly after daylight each winter morning, and I rush the grub. Seldom more than 20 feed at a time. I like to attribute to their nice regard for the other fellow's rights the fact that they feed only for a minute or so, then fly to a near bush, their places being taken by another 20 or so.

If I don't respond to their first demand for food, a definitely querulous note comes into their calls. This is not imagination on my part. Members of the family recognize the difference yet none of us is able to describe the change.

A black-headed, gray-bodied bird, having a flesh colored bill and white-edged tail — notice him a little more this winter. But don't start feeding him unless you mean to keep it up. Once he learns to depend on an artificial food supply, he has hard going if it's suddenly withdrawn.

Craterian Plans Celebration For 20-Year Service

The 20th anniversary of the Craterian Theatre will be celebrated by Medford's showhouse the week starting Sunday, Oct. 22. Although the theatre was opened October 20 in 1924, it was decided by Manager Hemmila to set aside the week starting the 22nd as "Anniversary Week", since the 20th will fall on Friday.

Breaking away from the standard two changes of program during the week, the Craterian will, for the anniversary week, have three different programs, each program selected with an eye to laughter and entertainment suitable to every member of the family.

On Sunday and Monday, Oct. 22 and 23, Olsen and Johnson in their newest comedy feature, "Ghost Catchers", will occupy the main part of the program. As added attractions with Olsen and Johnson, there will be a new "March of Time" subject, a technicolor cartoon and "Hot Money", one of the popular "America Speaks" series.

On Tuesday and Wednesday, Oct. 24 and 25, a combined stage and screen show has been secured as a special "Anniversary Week" program. A full hour of stage entertainment, with top performers from Los Angeles, San Francisco and Seattle, has been secured—the first big time vaudeville show to play here in some time. "Goin' To Town," with Lum and Abner, will be the feature attraction.

For Thursday, Friday and Saturday, Oct. 26, 27, and 28, "Take It Or Leave It", with Phil Baker asking the $64.00 questions will hold the featured spotlight. Alice Faye, Betty Grable and several other stars appear in the picture as guests of Baker in the picturization of the popular radio program of the same name.

"Musical Movieland" filmed in technicolor, a technicolor cartoon and a novelty of 20 years ago will be added attractions on the screen. And, as a special attraction on the stage Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights, the Craterian will have the finals of the "Miss Jackson County" contest.

Brazil, an important source of semi-precious stones and industrial diamonds, has established a school to train its own diamond cutters and polishers for the industry, which now employs 3,000 people in that country alone.

Children of colonized, leprous parents do not contract the disease, if removed from the colony by the second week of life.
