GERMANS SET TO LEAVE SALONIKA GREEKS BELIEVE

Rome, Oct. 28—(U.P.)—The Germans are showing signs of preparing to abandon Salonika, Greek port toward which they have been heading since they retired from Athens, 180 miles to the south, and the city is covered with smoke from their demolitions, RAF officials reported today.

Under harassing attacks of allied planes and Greek patriots, the Germans have been moving steadily toward Salonika. Where they intend to go from there is not clear, as Russian and Yugoslav partisan forces control most of the escape routes through the Balkans and the royal navy and air force dominate the Aegean, the eastern Mediterranean and the Adriatic.

RAF reconnaissance showed that German evacuation trains have left Katerini, halfway between Salonika and Larissa, allied-held city 80 miles to the southwest, after blowing up a tunnel at Iraklion on the east coast 20 miles south of Katerini.

Naval authorities announced today that allied forces had landed on the island of Piscopi in the Dodecanese within 25 miles of Rhodes, where an estimated 4,000 Germans are isolated with little hope of escape or rescue. The troops landed Thursday night and early Friday from the British cruiser Sirius.
